A broad definition of wetlands (521) ecosystems such as lakes and rivers, underground aquifers, swamps, coral reefs, and many others; but also, human-made artificial sites (522) fishponds or reservoirs. Though they cover only around 6 per cent of the Earth's land surface, 40 per cent of all plant and animal species live or breed in them. Wetlands are also vital for human wellbeing and security. More than a billion people across the world depend on them for their livelihoods, about one in eight people on Earth. According to the UN Environment Programme (UNEP), these ecosystems are also the unsung heroes of the climate crisis. In fact, they (523) more carbon than any other ecosystem, with peatlands alone storing twice (524) all the world's forests. And inland wetland ecosystems absorb excess water and help prevent floods and drought, something crucial to help communities adapt to a changing climate.

In the words of Leticia Carvalho, Principal Coordinator for Marine and Freshwater at UNEP, healthy wetlands 'punch above their weight in terms of benefits'. The theme for the very first World Day is 'Wetlands Action for People and Nature'. It serves as an urgent call to act and to invest financial, human, and political capital, to save the world's wetlands from disappearing altogether - and to restore those areas already lost. Wetlands are disappearing three times (525) forests and are Earth's most threatened ecosystem. In just 50 years - since 1970 - 35 per cent of the world's wetlands have evaporated.

Last week, I made the mistake of revisiting the village where I grew up. It used to be a small, friendly community with two farms and a number of old cottages round the village green. I realised very quickly that although in (531) ways it appears unchanged, in reality hardly anything is the same. All the pretty cottages are there, of course, and both the traditional farm houses. (532) none of the inhabitants are country people. All of them are commuters, who leave early every morning for the nearby town. Neither of the farmhouses are attached to a farm these days; the land (533) and is managed by somebody in an office somewhere who has little interest in the village (534). There are a few new houses but, they have no local character. You can see the same style anywhere in the country. The whole village, (535), has been tidied up so much that it looks no more picturesque than any suburban street.

Gender equality is not only a fundamental human right, but a necessary foundation for a peaceful, prosperous and sustainable world. There (541) progress over the last decades: More girls are going to school, fewer girls are forced into early marriage, more women are serving in parliament and positions of leadership, and laws are being reformed to (542) gender equality. Due to the fact that Shakespeare didn't produce an autobiography, (788) is known about many parts of his life and some of it remains a (789)! Sometime before 1590, Shakespeare left Stratford. But where did he go? Again, it is not clear why, although one story suggests it is because he had been forced to run away from home after poaching deer! Little is known about what he did but even usually he travelled to London, which was the biggest city in England, though much (790) than it is today. London provided opportunities unavailable anywhere else in the country and many poor people went hoping to make their fortunes. Importantly for Shakespeare, London had theatres! The first of these was opened in 1576 and by 1590 there were several playhouses including the Rose, the Theatre and the Curtain. (791) Shakespeare became an actor. However, he was soon writing plays too and by 1592, Shakespeare's work was being spoken about. One (792) writer - Robert Greene - wrote rude things about this newcomer and referred to him as an 'upstart crow'. Disaster struck in 1593 when a terrible disease called the plague hit London. Thousands of people became unwell and died and this caused the theatres to shut. Rather than giving up, Shakespeare turned to writing poems rather than plays and soon the theatres were reopened.

We live in (803) _____ age of wonders and miracles. It has been called the 'Age of Science', and different aspects of our life that changed in the (804) _____ centuries have been attributed to science. This is completely true, but it is only one side of the coin. The flip side is that as we have advanced more in the field of technology, something fundamental to humanity has been left behind. Values such as empathy and concern for our fellow human beings are gradually being eroded due to the onslaught of our ever-evolving lifestyles, aided by the marvels of technological advancements.

Take the example of the Internet. On one hand, access to information and knowledge at the click of a button is a veritable boon to everyone (especially students) and this has made our lives much simpler. On the other hand, it has severely limited actual contact with teachers, friends and elders. Thus, the learning that a person (805) _____ is incomplete as he or she cannot easily take the advice that another person can give on the basis of knowledge and practical experience that is at his or her disposal.

Today, a small child can access and navigate the Internet with an ease that still astounds (806) _____ from the older generation. In India, of late, pizza has become a (698) food. It has become a fashion trend and also a fashion statement. The popularity of the food is rocketing. This is (699) from a report by Fortune magazine. The two giants of the pizza industry, Pizza Hut and Dominos, are in hot (900), a manner of showing that one is part of the famous Western culture. In fact, it is more of an issue with each other in India. India has 134 Pizza

Huts and 149 Dominos locations, with each chain opening 50 stores a year. The popularity of pizza in India. For time claims, is because of its similarity to India's native cuisine. Unlike Chinese and Japanese, Indians eat leavened bread (roti or naan), and a popular traditional version slathers it in butter and garlic—not unlike garlic bread, the most often ordered side dish at both Dominos and Pizza Hut franchises in India. Cheese (paneer) is ubiquitous in India's northern cuisine.

Tomatoes and all kinds of sauces are (901) everywhere. Combine these ingredients into one gooey, oily, tasty dish that you can eat with your hands—as Indians traditionally do—and you have a hit. Compare this with other popular foods or noodles.

Human life is (917) a unique blessing, which in turn depends on the (918) of the Self. He who is not aware of the Self can neither have peace nor can he foster peaceful coexistence. We have to link our soul with God and body with the physical world for substance. (919) the formless God is invisible to the naked eye, our mind often wanders wherever it goes. (920), we are unable to develop any love for the Divine. And religion like the white light of heavens (921), multi-coloured fragmentations by the prisms of men and loses its gravity. Instead of uniting, it becomes a major dividing force. Oil is almost certainly one of the ocean's greatest resources. 33% of the world's oil comes from seaward fields in seas. Oils are liquids that easily burn and do not (1141) in water. Most of the time, they are made of chains of carbon and hydrogen atoms. There are three (1142) types of oils: mineral, essential and fixed oils. From plants, essential oils are thin, scented oils. Because they frequently have an odour, essential oils are (1143) in perfumery and food flavouring. Aromatic extraction processes like cold pressing, distillation and extraction are typically used to prepare essential oils. Fatty acids are used by animals and plants to make fixed oils. They are especially non-volatile oils that are found in the seeds of cotton, corn, flax, sunflowers, peanuts, coconuts and olives, as well as in fatty animal tissues. Mineral oils are (1144) from petroleum which has been underground for millions of years from sea organism skeletons. Mineral oils are one of the petroleum by-products with the lowest prices. Mineral oils are colourless and transparent. They are made up of a (1145) of hydrocarbons.

The Sun is about 1.4 million kilometres (1146) diameter, while the Earth is about 13,000 kilometres wide. This indicates that the Sun's width would need to be filled by more than one hundred Earths. Sunspots are dreary (1147) on the Sun's surface that are two thousand degrees Celsius cooler than the rest of the surface. The coolest piece of the sunspot is the dim focus called the umbra. The penumbra surrounds it. On the Sun's surface, some sunspots are just specks. Additionally, they appear in groups up to ten times larger than Earth. They can sometimes reach 200,000 miles in length. As the Sun rotates, these groups (1148) to travel across the Sun over two weeks. Every 11 years, the number of sunspots reaches its maximum. The solar or sunspot cycle (1149) to this. The Earth's weather may become more extreme and warm during the peak of sunspot activity. These changes have caused and will continue to cause some inconvenience, but they will also foster innovation and future reforms inside this education system.

(SSC (10+2) Stenographer Grade C & D Exam. 31.01.2016)

Like watering a plant, we grow our friendships (and all our relationships) by nurturing them. Friendships need the same attention as other relationships, if they are to continue. These relationships can be delightfully non-judgemental, supportive, understanding and fun.

Sometimes a friendship can bring out the positive side that you never show in any other relationship. This may be because the pressure of playing a 'role' (daughter, partner or child) is removed. With a friend you are to be yourself and free to change. Of course, you are free to do this in all other relationships as well, but in friendships you get to have lots of rehearsals and discussion about changes as you experience them.

It is an unconditional experience where you receive as much as you give. You can explain yourself to a friend openly without the fear of hurting a family member. How do friendships grow? The answer is simple. By revealing yourself; being attentive remembering what is most showing empathy, seeing the world through the eyes of your friend, you will understand the value of friendship. All this means learning to accept a person from a completely different family to your own or perhaps someone from a completely different cultural background. This is the way we learn tolerance. In turn we gain tolerance and acceptance for our own differences.

PASSAGE-I

When I think of my family's history on the land, I experience a pang of regret. Unlike much of the arid West, where the land has gone virtually unchanged for centuries, my place of origin, western Kansas, has been torn up by agriculture. The flat plains, excellent soil, and sparse but just adequate rainfall permitted farming; therefore farming prevailed, and a good 90% of the original sod prairie is gone. The consequence, in human terms, is that our relationship to our place has always felt primarily mercantile. We used the land and denied, or held at bay, its effect on us. Yet from my earliest childhood, when the most of the Kansas prairie was still intact, I've known that the land also had a romantic quality. I've felt moved by the expanse of it, enthralled by size. I take pride in my identity as a plains daughter.

16. Which of the following is the most accurate statement of the author's position?
(1) The presence of the people has enriched the plains habitat.
(2) Farming has improved the soil of the plains.
(3) Farming has chemically polluted the plains.
(4) Farming has eroded the natural beauty of the plains.

(3) feelings the author has picked up from personal experience.

(2) being a native of Kansas.
(3) being able to see the romantic quality of the land
(4) the ability to unite well.

(1) wind (2) heat

PASSAGE-II

Most economists in the United States seem captivated by the spell of the free market. Consequently, nothing seems good or normal that does not accord with the requirements of the free market. A price that is determined by the seller or, for that matter (for that matter: so far as that is concerned), established by anyone other than the aggregate of consumers seems pernicious. Accordingly, it requires a major act of will to think of price-fixing (the determination of prices by the seller) as both "normal" and having a valuable economic function. In fact, price-fixing is normal in all industrialised societies because the industrial system itself provides, as an effortless consequence of its own development, the price-fixing that it requires. Modern industrial planning requires and rewards great size. Hence, a comparatively small number of large firms will be competing for the same group of consumers. That each large firm will act with consideration of its own needs and thus avoid selling its products for more than its competitors charge is commonly recognised by advocates of free-market economic theories. But each large firm will also act with full consideration of the needs that it has in common with the other large firms competing for the same customers.

What does not seem as not good or normal in the context of this essay?

- (1) the new interest in free market
(2) being captivated by spell of the free market
(3) that which does not accord with the requirement of the free market
(4) the economists who are captivated by the free market

(1) agricultural societies
(2) industrialised societies
(3) pre-industrial societies
(4) globalised societies
23. A major act of will bring about price-fixing that will be seen as
(1) effective and productive
(2) constructive and practical
(3) normal and having valuable economic function
(4) systematic and relevant
24. Selling a commodity at a price that is not more than that charged by competitors is
(1) rejected by the free market system
(2) opposed by the advocates of the free market theories
(3) considered suspicious by the free market theorists
(4) recognised by the advocates of the free market theories

All art is, in an important sense, an escape. There is a sense in which the capacity to escape from his present experience, to use his accumulated consciousness of the past to project a vision of the future, is man's greatest and distinguishing ability. We must not forget the force of Aristotle's argument that poetry is valuable precisely because it shows men not simply as they are, but as they ought to be or (in terms more sympathetic to us today) as they are capable of becoming.

PASSAGE-V

To avoid the various foolish opinions to which mankind are prone, no superhuman brain is required. A few simple rules will keep you free, not from all errors, but from silly errors. If the matter is one that can be settled by observation, make the observation yourself. Aristotle could have avoided the mistake of thinking that women have fewer teeth than men, by the simple device of asking Mrs. Aristotle to keep her mouth open while he counted. Thinking that you know when in fact you do not is a bad mistake, to which we are all prone. I believe myself that hedgehogs eat black beetles, because I have been told that they do; but if I were writing a book on the habits of hedgehogs, I should not commit myself until I had seen one enjoying this diet. Aristotle, however, was less cautious. Ancient and medieval writers knew all about unicorns and salamanders, not one of them thought it necessary to avoid dogmatic statements about them because he had never seen one of them.

36. The author portrays mankind as
(1) superhuman
(2) by and large ignorant
(3) intelligent
(4) ancient
37. According to the author, unicorns and salamanders

PASSAGE-VI

In short, to write a good letter you must approach the job in the lightest and most casual way. You must be personal, not abstract. You must not say, 'This is too small a thing to put down'. You must say, 'This is just the sort of small thing we talk about at home. If I tell them this they will see me, as it were they'll hear my voice, they'll know what I'm talking about'. That is the purpose of a letter. Carlyle had the trick to perfection. He is writing from Scotsbrig to his brother Alec in Canada and he begins talking about his mother. Good old Mother, he says, 'she is even now sitting at my back, trying at another table to write you a small word with her own hand; the first time she has tried such a thing for a year past. It is Saturday night, after dark; we are in the east room in a hard, dry evening with a bright fire to our two selves; Jenny and her Barns are 'scouring up things' in the other end of the house; and below stairs the winter operations of the farm go on, in a subdued tone; you can conceive the scene! How simple it is and yet how perfect. Can not you see Alec reading it in his far-off home and his eyes moistening at the picture of his old mother sitting and writing her last message to him on earth?

41. 'Abstract' in the passage means
(1) a summary
(2) not paying attention
(3) concrete
(4) not having a physical reality
42. The recipient of your letter should _____
(1) use a lot of imagination.

(3) to put something in liquid for a time so that it becomes completely wet
(4) writing something quickly and carelessly
45. Subdued tone means _____
(1) not very loud
(2) unusually quiet and possibly unhappy
(3) not very busy
(4) not very bright

(SSC CGL Tier-II (CBE) Exam 17.02.2018)
PASSAGE-I

The conclusion of World Trade Organization's 11th biennial ministerial conference at Buenos Aires was as status quo continues in the most important issue: the right to continue the food security programme by using support prices. But the inability of the negotiators to reach even one substantive outcome suggests that WTO's efficacy is under question. As a 164-country multilateral organisation dedicated to crafting rules of trade through consensus, WTO represents the optimal bet for developing countries such as India. Strengthening WTO is in India's best interest.

Perhaps the biggest threat to WTO's efficacy today is the attitude of the US. The world's largest economy appears to have lost faith in the organisation and has begun to undermine one of its most successful segments, the dispute redressal mechanism. This is significant as the US has been directly involved in nearly half of all cases brought to WTO. Separately, large groups of countries decided to pursue negotiations on e-commerce, investment facilitation and removal of trade obstacles for medium and small scale industries. By itself this should not weaken WTO. But it comes at a time when there is growing frustration with gridlock at WTO.

India did well to defend its position on its food security programme. The envisaged reform package which will see a greater use of direct cash transfers to beneficiaries will be in sync with what developed countries do. But it is important for India to enhance its efforts to reinvigorate WTO. In this context, India's plan to organise a meeting of some countries early next year is a step in the right direction. WTO represents the best available platform to accommodate interests of a diverse set of nations. Therefore, India should be at the forefront of moves to fortify it.

46. Why was the WTO's 11th biennial ministerial conference worrisome?
(1) Denial of states quo.
(2) Inability of negotiators to reach to substantive outcome for the problems.
(3) Rift in the policies suggested by WTO on IFK
(4) Non-cooperation from Indian government on various matters.

47. What is the biggest threat to WTO's efficacy today?
(1) India being not working in its best interest.
(2) Lost of faith in WTO by US.
(3) Negotiators of WTO are not decision takers.
(4) WTO's lame attitude towards global trade.
48. Which of the following nation is keen to fortify its interest on WTO platform?
(1) USA (2) Japan
(3) Russia (4) India
49. Which of the following is the most successful segments of the WTO mentioned in the passage?
(1) Dispute redressal mechanism
(2) Intellectual Property Rights
(3) Reviewer of government's trade policies.
(4) Agreement on trade in services.
50. According to the passage, which of the following statement is NOT true?
(1) 11th WTO conference was held at Nairobi.
(2) India's take on food security programme in the WTO conference was positive.
(3) US is termed as the world's largest economy.
(4) US is involved directly in half of the cases brought to WTO

PASSAGE-II

One should consciously engage in activities that will nourish your soul. Just as we nourish the body, we need to nurture the soul to connect to the creative power of the universe and to manifest joy in our lives. Often, we forget to address the soul, lost as we are in a jungle of material and sensual pleasures. But the more you embrace what feeds your soul, the happier you become. So if you want to enrich the abundance of life, engage in what enriches your soul. Nurturing the soul is all about finding calm amidst chaos. There are a number of practices that empower people towards this end including silent contemplation, various forms of meditation, yoga and tai chi. However, the rigor and discipline involved in the pursuit of such practices often seems to discourage people. Add to this, the temptations of the material world that leave little time and motivation for anyone to pursue the spiritual path. Poet Walt Whitman declared: "Whatever satisfies the soul is truth". The good news is that simple, everyday activities can also nourish the soul — like spending time in the midst of nature, dancing in the rain or just putting thoughts on paper. Do whatever is calming and pleases you. Creative pursuits are particularly appealing as inside each one of us, there is an artist craving for release and awaiting an opportunity for expression. One of the ways to indulge the artist within is to get started with the practice of any one or more of the creative art forms such as music, singing, dancing, writing, drawing, painting, sculpting, poetry, fiction or essay writing.

When you engage in such soul nourishing activities, all thought and energy gets focused toward goal accomplishment. At this point, you will find that even unknown forces of the universe are conspiring to assist you. You are motivated to do better. You touch and access a faculty, a part of you that you never knew existed. Your inner artist is unleashed, baring the beauty of your soul that has found a fond medium of expression. For instance, a sculptor's soul is seen in his artwork, a musician's in his compositions, an actor's in his acting, a painter's in his paintings and so on. It is immaterial whether your effort is an immaculate artwork or just a clumsy attempt by a layperson. The idea is to try, be inspired and to create giving free rein to the mind. As Michelangelo remarked: "I saw the angel in the marble and carved until I set him free!"

51. According to the passage, what makes us really happy?
(1) A soulful music.
(2) A soulful sculptures art.
(3) Freeing our mind.
(4) Embracing what feeds our soul.
52. According to the passage, why even our amateurish attempts motivate us?
(1) Because even unknown forces of the universe are assisting us in them.
(2) Because we never knew that this part ever existed inside us.
(3) Because these amateur attempts of ours are insincere ones.
(4) Because they still are clumsy and need improvement.
53. What activities can nourish soul?
(1) Creative activities that needs your involvement.
(2) Any activity that doesn't touch the soul.
(3) Peaceful and calming activities.
(4) Immaculate artwork.
54. What can you infer from Michelangelo's statement - "I saw the angel in the marble and carved until I set him free"?
(1) Michelangelo's soul probably wanted to free the angel and hence his artwork portrayed the same.
(2) Michelangelo didn't like the angel and hence wanted to do away with it
(3) Michelangelo wanted his artwork to look as close to real as possible.
(4) Michelangelo's mind felt free after setting the angel free in his artwork.
55. Why do creative pursuits appeal us?
(1) They nourish our souls.
(2) Inside each one of us, is an artist craving to come out.
(3) They identify beauty of our body.
(4) They are not simple activities.

PASSAGE-III

The saddest part of life lies not in the act of dying, but in failing to truly live while we are alive. Too many of us play small with our lives, never letting the fullness of our humanity see the light of day. I've learned that what really counts in life, in the end, is not how many toys we have collected or how much money we've accumulated, but how many of our talents we have liberated and used for a purpose that adds value to this world. What truly matters most are the lives we have touched and the legacy that we have left. Tolstoy put it so well when he wrote: "We live for ourselves only when we live for others." It took me forty years to discover this simple point of wisdom.

Forty long years to discover that success cannot really be pursued. Success ensues and flows into your life as the unintended yet inevitable byproduct of a life spent enriching the lives of other people. When you shift your daily focus from a compulsion to survive towards a lifelong commitment to serve, your existence cannot help but explode into success. I still can't believe that I had to wait until the "half-time" of my life to figure out that true fulfillment as a human being comes not from achieving those grand gestures that put us on the front pages of the newspapers and business magazines, but instead from those basic and incremental acts of decency that each one of us has the privilege to practice each and every day if we simply make the choice to do so.

Mother Teresa, a great leader of human hearts if ever there was one, said it best: "There are no great acts, only small acts done with great love." I learned this the hard way in my life. Until recently, I had been so busy striving, I had missed out on living. I was so busy chasing life's big pleasures that I had missed out on the little ones, those micro joys that weave themselves in and out of our lives on a daily basis but often go unnoticed. My days were overscheduled, my mind was overworked and my spirit was underfed.

56. According to the passage, what does "failing to truly live while we are alive means"?

- (1) End up thinking of death all our lives.
- (2) Never letting the fullness of our humanity see the light of day.
- (3) Focus on basic and incremental acts of decency.
- (4) Over scheduling our days and over paying ourselves.

57. Suggest a suitable title for the passage?

- (1) True happiness as experienced by Mother Teresa
- (2) Forty years of discovery Tolstoy
- (3) Living truly
- (4) Learning it the hard way

58. According to the passage, what took Tolstoy forty years to discover?

- (1) Simple point of happiness.
- (2) That we live for ourselves only when we live for others.
- (3) That his spirit was undeterred
- (4) That he was a great leader of human hearts.

59. What according to the passage is success?

- (1) Success cannot be pursued.
- (2) Success is an unintended yet inevitable byproduct of a life spent enriching the lives of others.
- (3) Success is true fulfillment.
- (4) Success is incremental act of decency.

60. According to the passage, what did Mother Teresa learned the hard way in her life?

- (1) That there are no great acts, only small acts are done with great love.
- (2) That she had been so busy striving that she had missed out on living.
- (3) That her days were over scheduled and her mind was over worked.
- (4) That she was so busy chasing life's big pleasures that she had missed out on the little one's.

Teaching about compassion and empathy in schools can help deal with problems of climate change and environmental degradation," says Barbara Maas, secretary.

Standing Committee for Environment and Conservation, International Buddhist Confederation (IBC). She was in New Delhi to participate in the IBC's governing council meeting, December 10-11, 2017. "We started an awareness campaign in the year 2005-2006 with H. H The Dalai Lama when we learnt that tiger skins were being traded in China and Tibet. At that time, I was not a Buddhist. I wrote to the Dalai Lama asking him to say that 'this is harmful' and he wrote back to say, 'We will stop this.' He used very strong words during the Kalachakra in 2006, when he said, 'If he sees people wearing fur and skins, he doesn't feel like living. This sent huge shock waves in the Himalayan community. Within six months, in Lhasa, people ripped the fur trim of their tubba, the traditional Tibetan dress.

The messenger was ideal and the audience was receptive," says Maas who is a conservationist. She has studied the battered fox's behavioral ecology in Serengeti, Africa. She heads the endangered species conservation at the Nature and Biodiversity Conservation Union (NABU) Rinpoche, The Karmapa, HH the Dalai Lama and Geshe Lhakdor and I thought, if by being a Buddhist, you become like this, I am going for it," says Maas, who led the IBC initiative for including the Buddhist perspective to the global discourse on climate change by presenting the statement, 'The Time to Act is Now: a Buddhist Declaration on Climate Change,' at COP21 in Paris.

"It was for the first time in the history of Buddhism that leaders of different sanghas came together to take a stand on anything! The statement lists a couple of important things: the first is that we amass things that we don't need; there is overpopulation; we need to live with contentment and deal with each other and the environment with love and compassion," elaborates Maas. She is an ardent advocate of a vegan diet because "consuming meat and milk globally contributes more to climate change than all transport in the world."

Turning vegetarian or vegan usually requires complete change of perspective before one gives up eating their favorite food. What are the Buddhist ways to bring about this kind of change at the individual level? "To change our behavior, Buddhism is an ideal vehicle; it made me a more contented person," says Maas, who grew up in Germany, as a sausage chomping, meat-loving individual. She says, "If I can change, so can anybody".

Doing an internship at the University of Lille in France, I almost always found myself stuck whenever I had to speak to non-Indians about India or on anything 'Indian'. This was more because of the subtle differences in the way the French understood India in comparison to what I thought was 'Indian'. For instance, when I, or any Indian for that matter, say 'Hindi' is an Indian language, what it means is that it is one of the languages widely spoken in India. This need not be similar to the understanding that the French would have when they hear of 'Hindi' as an Indian language. Because for them Hindi then becomes the only language spoken in India. This is a natural inference that the French, Germans, Italians and many other European nationals would tend to make, because that is generally how it is in their own respective countries. The risk of such inappropriate generalisations made about 'Indian' is not restricted to language alone but also for India's landscape, cuisine, movies, music, climate, economic development and even political ideologies. The magnitude of diversity of one European country can be easily compared to that of one of the Indian State. Isn't it? Can they imagine that India is one country whose diversity can be equated to that of the entire European continent? The onus is upon us to go ahead and clarify the nuances in 'Indianness' while we converse. But why should one do so? How does it even matter to clarify?

66. Why do some French people think that Hindi is the only Indian language?

- (1) Because that is the way in most European countries.
- (2) That is what is being taught to them.
- (3) They know India is also called as Hindustan so people there must speak only Hindi.
- (4) As most Indians they meet speak Hindi.

67. The writer was working at a university in which country?

- (1) France
- (2) Germany
- (3) Italy
- (4) India

68. What wrong with respect to India are the Europeans responsible for?

- (1) Their hatred towards Indian culture.
- (2) Their complete lack of knowledge regarding India's past.
- (3) That India is economically decades behind the developed world.
- (4) Their inappropriate generalizations.

69. The writer compares diversity of one European country to the diversity of _____.

- (1) One major city in India
- (2) One Indian State
- (3) The whole continent of Asia
- (4) The whole world

70. According to the writer the responsibility of explaining the facts about India to Europeans rests with?

- (1) Europeans

It was a bittersweet moment for me when I found out that I had been selected for the Sakura Science Exchange programme, a Robotics and IoT workshop in Japan.

A fully-funded opportunity of a lifetime. Fly off to Saitama without a care on the world, and all I had to do was put into practice what I love to do - computer science. The bitter part of the episode - that I would lose two weeks of IB education, an almost literal mountain to cover when I got back - was quickly forgotten when I envisioned myself programming robots in the country that gave us Anime and sushi! It was with the eagerness to have an extended vacation in an un-visited land, and the opportunity to learn more about a subject that I am passionate about, that I headed to the Kempegowda International Airport outside Bengaluru. Little did I know this would be the experience of a lifetime, more for the endearing values of the Japanese culture that made their mark on me than anything else. The first feature of Japanese society that called out to me was the Discipline. Walking into the Narita International Airport, used as I was to the noisy crowds back in India, I quite literally lost my breath to the sight that awaited me. Be it the security check or baggage claim, somehow there was a silence that felt right. Everyone went about their activities without any confusion. And, contrary to the bharatiya custom of lazy pot-bellied officials, every guard and all counter personnel did what they were supposed to do to ensure this flow was maintained.

71. What was it that the writer did not like about his trip to Japan?

- (1) That the trip was so short
- (2) That he would be compelled to eat sushi
- (3) That he would miss a fortnight worth of IB education
- (4) That Japanese people are too disciplined

72. What did the writer notice when he arrived at Narita International Airport?

- (1) The bags arriving on time in baggage claim
- (2) The cleanliness
- (3) That there was no security check
- (4) The silence

73. Why was the writer travelling to Japan?

- (1) On a holiday
- (2) For two weeks of IB education
- (3) For employment
- (4) To attend a robotics workshop

74. What aspect of Japanese culture left a mark on the writer?

- (1) Their cuisine
- (2) Their unity
- (3) Their health consciousness
- (4) Their values

75. Which country is credited for producing Anime?

- (1) India
- (2) Japan
- (3) China

Passage-I

(Q. No. 76 - 80)

Vibrant salads, wholesome bites, vegan baking, all vegetarian! Thus proclaimed a billboard on a stand placed just outside The Lighthouse Cafe. Well, well, well, I thought to myself, another one of those places designed to attract tourists, can't be genuine, can it? I couldn't have been more wrong. I embarked on a walking tour of Galway, a city facing the Atlantic, in the Republic of Ireland, and my guide was Billy Murray who told me at the outset that I would be the solitary walker - others had stayed away because of the dismal weather. The weather had indeed been unfriendly, with beating rain, thunder, poor visibility and of course, gray and cold, especially on the Wild Atlantic Way where I had braved the weather and carried on with a coach tour I'd booked earlier, after having spent the previous day driving down to Galway from Dublin. But today the rains had stopped and the sky was clear but still gray and yet, I found the ambience rather romantic and full of promise. "Of course, we'll go on that walking tour", I said to a surprised Billy who led me out of the Tourist Centre in down town and towards the town's main washed street. At the end of the rather comprehensive tour I asked Billy for advice - where should I eat my lunch? And he'd recommended the Lighthouse Cafe near Lynch's Castle (now a bank) when I specified that I was vegetarian.

It seems there are quite a few local residents who are vegetarian and more are exploring this choice, mainly because of health and environmental reasons. But the decor inside the restaurant suggested that the owner turned to this choice due to compassion. I remembered then that Billy did mention that Kerry Leigh and her spouse, who run the place, practice Sahaj Marga meditation. The lotus flower on the place, practice feature of the restaurant's interior. Be that as it may, my lunch turned out to be one of the best vegetarian ones I've ever had anywhere in the world. When I'd entered the restaurant, a large dog that answers to the name of Chieftain was seated beside his owner, intently watching him eat without begging even once. Maybe it too practised some kind of meditation, I figured.

(Q. No. 81-85)

The Russian doping scandal continues to cast a long shadow over international sport as the 2018 Winter Olympics in Pyeong Chang, South Korea, on February 9. In December, the International Olympic Committee banned Russia from competing in the Games following investigation into an alleged state-sponsored doping programme at the 2014 Winter Olympics in Sochi, Russia. The decision to ban Russia came after the IOC's Disciplinary Commission, headed by former president of the Swiss Confederation Michael Schmid, confirmed "systemic manipulation of the anti-doping rules and system in Russia". The IOC had stated, however, that clean Russian athletes would be allowed to compete as neutrals and last month invited 169 of them - known as Olympic Athlete from Russia (OAR) - to participate in the Pyeong Chang Games. The announcement did not go down well outside Russia, even though the IOC declared that "more than 80%" of those athletes had not competed in Sochi and had been carefully screened. That the OAR will form one of the largest contingents at the Games, although there will be no place for the Russian flag and anthem, makes the 'ban' seem a bit of a farce. Russian athletes could be allowed to march under their own flag at the closing ceremony if they comply with the IOC's conditions during the Games. There is a sense that the IOC is not able to punish a sporting superpower like Russia.

Meanings of difficult words/phrases

1. cast a long shadow (Id.) : to continue to have consequences well into the future
2. go down well (Id.) : to produce a particular reaction
3. vetted (Verb) : make a careful examination of
4. farce (Noun) : sham; mockery

81. Where was the Winter Olympic 2014 held?

- (1) Pyeong Chang, South Korea
- (2) Sochi, Russia
- (3) Vancouver, Canada
- (4) Turin, Italy

82. Why is Russia banned to compete in Winter Olympics 2018?

- (1) Due to manipulation of the anti-doping rules in Winter Olympics, 2014.
- (2) Because of misbehaviour of Russian players with players of other teams.
- (3) As Russian players are not fit enough to take the pressure of Olympic games held on such a big platform.
- (4) As Russia is in some war with South Korea where the games are to be played.

83. Why does ban on Russian flag and anthem during Winter Olympic Games 2018 seem a bit of a farce?

- (1) Because Russian Athletes will be one of the largest teams to compete in the games.
- (2) The games are organised in Russia only.
- (3) Russia has always played these games legally and ethically.
- (4) Russian players are best in the world when it comes to playing in Olympics.

84. Now is it evident from the passage that IOC is not able to punish a sporting superpower like Russia fully?

- (1) Russian flag will be a part of opening ceremony of Olympics Games.
- (2) Russian athletes will be allowed to march under their flag at the closing ceremony of the games.
- (3) Russian athletes are being given special treatment at the games as compared to those of other countries.
- (4) None of these

85. When did the decision to ban Russia in Winter Olympic Games 2018 come?

- (1) It was after IOC's head confirmed systematic manipulation of the anti doping rules and system in Russia in Winter Olympics Games 2014.
- (2) It was after examining Russian athletes who didn't qualify the rules for the games to play.
- (3) It was after Russia argued for special treatment to be given to its players during the games.

Passage-III

(Q. No. 86-90)

Religious architecture forms a major portion of India's built heritage. These structures are not only unwritten documents of history, they are also stamps of the might of the rulers who built them and articulations of grand visions.

Secular and religious structures are products of their location - the material used to build them depended on what was available to the kings and workers at that time. They were also a reflection of the piety of the artisans and workers, for nothing else can explain the hard work that went into cutting through solid natural rock to carve out temples and spectacular sculptures. Rock-cut architecture never fails to awe me with all its majesty, precision, and intricate detail. The earliest rock-cut architecture is from the Mauryan dynasty, but the Ajanta caves, which I had visited a few decades ago and which left me awestruck, are among the earliest rock-cut temples.

The Udayagiri caves, in Vidisha, Madhya Pradesh, are not as popular but they are worth a visit, for they contain some of the oldest Hindu temples and iconography. They were built during the Gupta period (350-550 CE).

These caves were not just an expression of religious piety but also a political statement. They lie on two low sandstone hills between the rivers Betwa and Beas. It is possible that when these caves were carved out, they fell directly on the Tropic of Cancer and thus the name translates to Mount of Sunrise. On the day of summer solstice, the sun would have been directly overhead, making this a place of worship.

Meanings of difficult words/phrases

1. piety (Noun) : devotion; reverence
2. iconography (Noun) : a collection of illustrations/portraits
3. solstice (Noun) : either of the two times in the year, the summer solstice (June 21) and the winter solstice (December 21), when the sun reaches its highest/lowest point in the sky at noon, marked by the longest and shortest days

86. From what all materials the kings in the past used to build beautiful architectures?
- The material that was available to the kings and workers at that time
 - Special kind of raw material was asked to be produced by the people by the king to build these architectures.
 - Most of the material was imported from outside India by the kings.
 - None of these

87. What qualities of the architecture made the author to be awestruck while seeing them?
- Its majesty
 - Its precision
 - Its intricate detail
 - All of these

88. The earliest rock cut architecture is from which dynasty?
- Maurayan
 - Gupta
 - Chola
 - Saivahana

89. Why Udayagiri caves are worth a visit?
- Because they contain some of the oldest Hindu temples and iconography
 - Because they are built in Gupta period
 - Because they don't take much time to see them completely
 - Because they have reverence for our ancestors

90. Why the caves of Vidisha got its name as Udayagiri - Mount of Sunrise?
- It is because the day of winter solstice, the sun is directly overhead to the caves.
 - It is because when the rock was carved out of these caves, it fell onto Tropic of Cancer.
 - It is because Gupta had deep reverence for Sun god.
 - None of these

Passage-IV

(Q. No. 91-95)

Malnutrition affects millions of people worldwide and is responsible for one-fifth of deaths in children under the age of five. Children can also experience impaired cognitive development and stunted growth.

According to Finlay and UBC PhD student Eric Brown, malnutrition can be difficult to treat because it affects the good bacteria that live in the gut. People suffering from malnutrition often show signs of a disease known as environmental enteropathy, which is an inflammatory disorder of the small intestine and is likely caused by ingesting pathogenic fecal bacteria early in life from a contaminated environment. This shifts the balance of the original healthy bacteria in the gut and leads to poor absorption of nutrients.

The study, published in Nature Communications, explains how the research team developed a mouse model to reproduce the symptoms of environmental enteropathy and malnourishment.

"We were able to see how a malnourished diet has a strong, measurable impact on the microbes in the small intestine," said Brown. "This new model gives us the opportunity to examine the impact of malnutrition on gut microbiology and assess the role of infections."

Pathogenic bacterial infections like Salmonella and E. coli are huge problems in developing countries because they are much more harmful to people suffering from malnutrition, leading to chronic diarrhea and inflammation.

"Treatments and vaccines created in developed nations and tested on healthy people often don't work in malnourished populations," said Finlay, distinguished professor at UBC's Peter Wall Institute for Advanced Studies. "People suffering from malnutrition respond differently. With an animal model, Finlay said researchers will be better able to test treatments and understand how malnutrition impacts a child's development."

Question No. 96-100 (Q. No. 96-100) (G. No. 96-100)

Passage-I

The elusive and charismatic snow leopard has lost its endangered status in the Red List of the International Union for Conservation of Nature, causing genuine worry among wildlife biologists, who believe this sends out the wrong signal to those working to protect it. If the argument for a downgrade to vulnerable status from endangered is that conservation actions have reduced the threat to the cat, there is an equally persuasive response on how little we know about its population health, given its remote habitat in the alpine zones of the Himalayas and trans-Himalayas. As a major range country, India has worked to protect these animals, and even launched a programme on the lines of Project Tiger for its conservation, covering 25,757 sq. km of habitat in Jammu and Kashmir, Himachal Pradesh, Uttarakhand, Sikkim and Arunachal Pradesh. There is also an upcoming international collaborative effort, the Global Snow Leopard and Ecosystem Protection program, involving the countries that make up the range of this graceful animal. It is vital that this momentum should not be lost merely on account of the technicality that the estimated numbers have crossed the threshold for an 'endangered' classification, which is 2,500. If our studies on its vulnerability have to be intensified, and the task of monitoring its entire habitat of high mountains speeded up.

Meanings of difficult words/phrases

- elusive (Adjective) : difficult to find/catch/track down
- charismatic (Adjective) : charming; attractive
- downgrade (Adjective) : lower in status
- vulnerable (Adjective) : in danger; endangered

- momentum (Noun) : strength; power; drive

96. Which countries will be involved in the collaboration to protect the snow leopard?

- Member countries of International Union for Conservation of Nature.
- Countries which are financing the project to conserve the snow leopard.
- Same countries which participated in Project Tiger.
- Countries where the snow leopard is found.

97. Why do the scientists find it difficult to study the snow leopard?

- Due to its remote habitat.
- Due to lack of funding.
- Due to its nocturnal habits.

98. The snow leopards habitat overlaps all these states except _____.

- Uttarakhand
- Sikkim
- Arunachal Pradesh.
- Uttar Pradesh

99. Why did the snow leopard lose its 'endangered' status?

- Due to increase in its habitat area.
- Due to disagreement between wildlife experts.
- Due to inability in counting its population.
- Due to rise in its numbers.

100. On what factor is the classification of a species decided?

- How critical that species is in the food web.
- Its population.
- Its habitat.
- On expert opinion.

Passage-II

(Q. No. 101-105)

As the 23rd conference of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change in Bonn shifts into high gear, developing countries including India are focussing on the imperatives of ensuring adequate financing for mitigation and adaptation. They are moving ahead with specific instruments for loss and damage they suffer due to destructive climate-linked events. India's progress in reducing the intensity of its greenhouse gas emissions per unit of GDP by 20-25% from 2005 levels by 2020, based on the commitment made in Copenhagen in 2009, has been positive. Early studies also suggest that it is on track to achieve the national pledge under the 2015 Paris Agreement for a 33-35% cut in emissions intensity per unit of growth from the same base year (2015) by 2030, and thus heed the 2°C global warming goal. Since this performance is predicated on a growth rate of just over 7%, and the parallel target for 40% share of renewable energy by that year (2030), the national road map is clear. What is not, however, is the impact of extreme weather events such as droughts and floods that would have a bearing on economic growth. It is in this context that the rich countries must give up their rigid approach towards the demands of low and middle income countries, and come to an early resolution on the question of financing of mitigation, adaptation and compensation. Of course, India could further raise its ambition in the use of green technologies and emission cuts, which would give it the mantle of global climate leadership.

Meanings of difficult words/phrases

- shift into high gear (Id.) : to be/become very active, exciting, or productive
- imperatives (Noun) : an essential/urgent thing
- mitigation (Noun) : reduction; lessening
- on track (Phr.) : on course, on target
- heed (Verb) : pay attention to
- adaptation (Noun) : adjustment
- predicated (Verb) : found/base something on

101. The rich and the poor countries have not yet agreed on which issue?

- The time frame by which each country should achieve their climate goals.
- The amount of acceptable rise in global temperature.
- How to fund the costs for mitigation, adaptation and compensation.
- The share of renewables in energy generation.

102. What is the Paris Agreement's central aim?
- To keep rise in global temperature below 2°C
 - To compel rich countries to give up their rigid approach
 - Force developing countries to be more ambitious in their emission cuts
 - The world should have atleast 40% energy from renewables.

103. India has/had plans to generate 40% of its energy from renewables by which year?
- 2030
 - 2009
 - 2015
 - 2020

- Make more emission cuts
 - Host the next conference on climate change.
 - Successfully force rich countries to give up their rigid approach.
 - Keep economic growth rate at 7%.

105. India has set a target to reduce by 33-35% its emissions intensity per unit of GDP growth in how many years?
 - 15
 - 20

Rajendran belongs to the Irula tribe, one of India's oldest indigenous communities, who live along the northeastern coast of the state of Tamil Nadu. They are known for their ancient and intimate knowledge of snakes, and their skills form an important but nearly invisible part of the healthcare system in India.

"Many people are scared of snakes," Rajendran said. "But we must remember that the snake is only interested in survival. If we move in agitation, the snake perceives a threat and can strike. If we stand still, however, it will often slither away."

We were at the offices of the Irula Snake Catchers Industrial Co-Operative Society, which was formed in 1978 in Vadanemmel to capture snakes and extract their venom. Nearly 50,000 people die of snakebites each year in the country, and the only reliable treatment is the prompt administration of anti-venom. Six companies across India produce around 1.5 million vials of anti-venom annually, and most of it is derived from the venom extracted by the Irulas.

Rajendran showed us a sunken sandpit enclosed by a low brick wall. A high thatched roof protected the space from the sun, and a small raised platform in the centre of the pit had a simple blackboard with details of the snakes being held in the facility. This was the venom extraction site.

"We aren't holding too many snakes right now," he said, pointing to the numerous rows of clay pots, neatly arranged in a thatched structure. Each pot will be half-filled with snake chow before housing two snakes each, and the mouth of the pot will be carefully sealed with porous cotton cloth so that the snakes can't leave the pot but there is still enough air for them to breathe.

The co-operative has official licences to hold about 400 snakes at a time. "We keep every snake for 21 days, and extract venom four times during that period," Rajendran said. The snakes are then released into the wild. A small mark on their belly scales prevents the same snake from being caught repeatedly. "The mark goes away after a few months."

Rajendran's confidence in handling snakes and his deep understanding of these creatures are derived from a childhood spent in the forests and scrublands of the region. Before he turned 10, he had seen hundreds of snakes being captured. The Irulas usually work in silence, even when they go into the forest with others. They instinctively know the significance of faint signs on the ground to either follow clues or dismiss them. However, they often find it hard to articulate the details of their understanding, even to people who study reptiles.

111. What is the best way to save yourself when a snake is near you?

- try to run away
- stand still

113. How did Rajendran learn snake catching?

- He learnt it instinctively from his childhood spent in the wild.
- He learned it in the village school.
- He learnt it at the Irula Cooperative Society.
- He learnt it at an anti venom factory.

114. The main theme of the passage is :

- to inform about the Irula tribe and their specialization in snake catching.
- to talk about the importance of snake catching in the area of medicine.
- to talk about the Irula Snake Catchers Industrial Co-Operative Society.
- to tell about Rajendran, the snake catcher.

115. Which statement is NOT true according to the passage?

- Nearly 50000 people die of snake bite in India
- Irula's skills form an important part of the healthcare system in India.

Held on : 08.02.2019 (Shift-II)

A new paper published by Rochman and her colleagues in February, in the journal Ecology, sifts through past research on marine debris to assess the true extent of the environmental threat. Plenty of studies have sounded alarm bells about the state of marine debris. Rochman and her colleagues set out to determine how many of those perceived risks are real. Often, Rochman says, scientists will wrap up a paper by speculating about the broader impacts of what they've found. Maybe their study has shown that certain seabirds eat plastic bags, for example, and the paper goes on to warn that whole bird populations are at risk of dying out. "But the truth was that nobody had yet tested those perceived threats," Rochman says. "There wasn't a lot of information." Rochman and her colleagues examined more than a hundred papers on the impacts of marine debris that were published through 2013. Within each paper, they asked what threats scientists had studied. 366 perceived threats in all and what they'd actually found. In 83 percent of cases, the perceived dangers of ocean trash were proven true. In most of the remaining cases, the working group found the studies too shoddy to draw conclusions from—they lacked a control group, for example, or used faulty statistics. Strikingly, Rochman says, only one well-designed study failed to find the effect it was looking for, an investigation of mussels ingesting microscopic plastic bits. The plastic moved from the mussels' stomachs to their bloodstreams, scientists found, and stayed there for weeks—but didn't seem to stress out the shellfish. A lot of ocean debris is "microplastic," or pieces smaller than five millimetres. These may be the beads from a facial scrub, fibres shed by synthetic clothing in the wash, or eroded remnants of larger debris. Compared to the number of studies investigating large-scale debris, Rochman's group found little research on the effects of these tiny bits. There are also, she adds, a lot of open questions about the ways that ocean debris can lead to sea-creature death. Many studies have looked at how plastic affects an individual animal, or that animal's tissues or cells, rather than whole populations. And in the lab, scientists often use higher concentrations of plastic than what's really in the ocean. None of that tells us how many birds or fish or sea turtles could die from plastic pollution—or how deaths in one species could affect that animal's predators, or the rest of the ecosystem. "We need to be asking more ecologically relevant questions," Rochman says. Usually, scientists don't know how disasters like oil spills or nuclear meltdowns will affect the environment until after they've happened, she says. "We don't ask the right questions early enough." But if ecologists can understand how the slow-moving disaster of ocean garbage is affecting ecosystems, they might be able to prevent things from getting worse.

116. Select the option to complete the statement below.

- According to the passage, the significant difference between natural disasters and ecological disasters, especially with reference to marine debris, is that
- ecological disasters are not natural and man-made.
 - the latter can be predicted and prevented
 - ocean debris does not cause natural disasters but could become more dangerous
 - we study the former after they happen and the latter before they happen

117. Select the option that describes the central theme developed in the passage.

- (1) Research has to only include studies on the effects of microplastic on ecology.
- (2) Future ecological research on marine debris must understand the nature of ecological disaster and prevent it.
- (3) Current research on the impact of marine debris is not defective.
- (4) Papers published up to 2013 employ proper research methods.

118. What according to the author is the problem with papers reporting seabirds eating plastic?

- (1) These scientists do not ask ecologically relevant questions.
- (2) The scientists use concentrated plastic to generate data.
- (3) We agree with the perceptions of the scientists but not their methods.
- (4) Generalizations about whole populations getting affected lack verifiable data.

119. Select the option to complete the statement below. The perceived dangers of ocean trash for marine life are, in a majority of cases

- (1) false
- (2) valid
- (3) premature
- (4) exaggerated

120. Which ONE of the following conclusions based on the examination of the hundred-odd papers on marine debris and its ecological impact by Rochman and her colleagues is NOT CORRECT?

- (1) Issues with the focus, scope and findings of previous research inform future studies.
- (2) More than fifty percent of the past ecological studies failed to perceive the threats posed by marine debris.
- (3) Researchers tend to overgeneralize while discussing the implications of their findings.
- (4) That ocean garbage endangers ecosystems has not been fully understood.

Question No. (121-125) :

(SSC Stenographer Grade 'C' and 'D' Exam, 08.02.2019 (Shift-II))

As a toddler growing up in the 1950s, Richard Wawro threw violent tantrums. Often, he would tap the same piano key for long stretches of time. When he was three, his parents took him for testing at a nearby hospital. They were told that he was moderately to severely retarded. His family, however, never believed that his IQ was as low as the experts claimed. A special education teacher began working with Richard when he was six. She introduced him to drawing with crayons, which he took to quickly. He began filling sketchbooks (and the wallpaper of his Scotland home) with startlingly accurate depictions of cartoon characters like Yogi Bear. When Richard was 12, his artwork astounded a visiting artist who said that his drawings were created with the precision of a mechanic and the vision of a poet. Richard could never read or write well. His speech remained limited. But his involvement with the art world spurred his social development. He participated in dozens of exhibitions and became a well-known documentary. 'With Eyes Wide Open' about Richard was a savant, an individual with a spike in one ability combined with an impairment or disability in other areas. The condition, characterized by social and communication challenges, like difficulty making eye contact or making conversation, along with repetitive behaviors or narrow interests. It turns out that many savants have autistic traits. In extreme memory, excellent attention to detail and perceptual abilities. They have the same prolific output. But there is a key difference between the two. While in savants, the extreme abilities are paired with an underlying impairment or disability, prodigies don't typically have any such disability. Even though prodigies are not typically autistic, they have the same excellent memories, extreme attention to detail and passionate interests linked to autism and autistic savants.

121. Which ONE of the following statements about Richard is FALSE?

- (1) Richard was communicatively challenged.
- (2) Richard received special education.
- (3) Richard was an illiterate.
- (4) Richard was a renowned artist.

122. Which ONE of the statements given as options is TRUE?

- (1) All savants have no disabilities while all prodigies suffer from some (or other) disability.
- (2) All savants suffer from certain disabilities while all prodigies suffer from none.
- (3) Some savants have no disabilities while some prodigies might suffer from a disability.
- (4) Some savants have some (or other) disability while all prodigies suffer none.

123. Which ONE of the options makes the meaning of 'savant' as it emerges in the passage clear?

- (1) an autistic who exhibits exceptional skill or brilliance in all fields
- (2) a person of learning, especially one with deep knowledge in some specialized field
- (3) an autistic with preternatural abilities, exhibiting exceptional skill or brilliance in a specific field
- (4) an autistic who exhibits exceptional skill or brilliance in some limited field

124. Why does the author bring in the topic of prodigies in a discussion of autistic savants?

- (1) Because comparing abilities of both prodigies and autistic savants would help us appreciate the capabilities of the latter.
- (2) Because it would reorient people who treat autism with contempt.
- (3) Because he sees the two as related to the same topic.
- (4) Because their abilities are often rooted in memory, excellent attention to detail and passionate interests.

125. Which ONE of the statements sums up what the passage is about?

- (1) The case of Richard, a savant, illustrates the discovery that the dividing line between a prodigy and a savant is just the presence of a disability.
- (2) Rather than conclude that autistic patients have limited IQ, we must make the effort to discover the special ability each autistic patient has.
- (3) Kids with autism, if encouraged, could turn out to be a savant as they share a range of extraordinary abilities with prodigies.
- (4) When the instance of an autistic is examined closely, it is found that some diagnosed as autistic might be a savant with a 'spiked' extra-ordinary ability.

(SSC Stenographer Grade 'C' and 'D' Exam, 08.02.2019 (Shift-II))

Where is this going? That is the question at the heart of River of Life, River of Death, as author Victor Mallet travels the length of the Ganges. Beginning at its ice cave source in the Himalayan foothills, the spindly banks through the holy confluence at Allahabad, the river spews millions of tons of fertile silt on to the rice fields of Bengal and the mangroves of the Sundarbans.

It is the same question he asks about the treatment of the Ganges, both good and bad. The river leads a double life being the most worshipped waterway in the world and also one of the most polluted. The Ganges and its tributaries are now subject to sewage pollution that is 'half a million times over the Indian recommended limit for bathing in places, not to mention the unchecked runoff from heavy metals, fertilizers, carcinogens and the occasional corpse.

As Mallet observes the danger of contamination does not put off the millions of revellers at Kumbh Mela. It is a Hindu pilgrimage 'thought to be the largest gathering of people anywhere', described to him as 'a spiritual expo... where you will be talking one moment to a visiting Mumbai businessman and the next to a Marijuana-stoned Yogi.' He suggests the pollution might never deter them. He is told by one bather: 'we do believe that anyone who takes in this water, he becomes pure also, because it is always pure.' There is a collective sense that the spirit of the Ganges is so sacred that she can never be spoiled.

He informs the reader in the preface 'almost everyone knows the problems are real'. His journey down the Ganges is one of investigation rather than discovery. Mallet investigates the potential of the river to become a cradle for antibiotic-resistant infections - or 'superbugs' - that could be exported to other regions by global travel. He points out that some 450 million people depend on the Ganges water basin for survival, and many more for its religious and cultural importance. The Ganges is a goddess and a mother to everyone from the politician in the north, to the humblest Hindu living in the far south or running a motel in the United States.

There is hope. Mallet draws some parallels to clean-ups of the Rhine and the Thames. He points to the design feat of Kumbh Mela, which as 'a pop-up megacity' for two million pilgrims has better infrastructure and waste treatment than many Indian cities. 'In the minds of both Indians and foreigners, this raises important questions... if the authorities can build infrastructure so efficiently for this short but very large festival, why can they not do the same for permanent villages and towns?

126. Which ONE of the options fills in the blank and completes the statement below correctly?

The Ganges is a mother to the devout Hindu, however, it is to the non-Hindu Indian _____ and _____.

- (1) a spectacle, locus for the Kumbh Mela
- (2) a source of water, a garbage bin
- (3) an interesting tourist spot, a zone for adventure sports
- (4) a cultural icon, provider of life

127. Which ONE of the statements below is FALSE?

- (1) Victor Mallet asks the question 'where is it going?' of the river Ganges which has a metaphorical relevance too.
- (2) A clean River Ganges is as feasible as a clean River Thames or River Rhine.
- (3) The Ganges carries superbugs and it is a problem all Indians are aware of.
- (4) The Kumbh Mela is a witness not only to the devotion of a section of Indians but also their skills of crowd management.

128. Which ONE of the options faithfully sums up the main ideas of the passage?

- (1) The Ganges is a holy river for Hindus who venerate it, live off it but also pollute it.
- (2) The river Ganges is a river that gives life and hope to all but it is a pity that its abusers are not aware that they are pushing it to its extinction.
- (3) The Ganges is multifaceted personality - venerated as a mother, it tolerates as a mother all the pollutants thrown into it.
- (4) An objective assessment of the river Ganges, life-giving and death-threatening, fosters not only faith but also hope among its admirers of its redemption in future.

129. Which ONE of the options fills in the blank and completes the statement below correctly?

The average believer is of the faith-driven conviction that the river Ganges

- (1) shall never be the object of an investigation
- (2) may never die due to pollution
- (3) will never infect the believer.
- (4) can never be spoiled.

130. Which ONE of the options fills in the blank and completes the statement below correctly?

The river Ganges is 'the most worshipped waterway in the world and also one of the most polluted'. This brings to light, in reality, _____.

- (1) the contrarian nature of the average Indian
- (2) the democratic space it provides to the CEO and the Yogi
- (3) the dangers of bathing in the river at any place
- (4) the double life that the river leads

SSC SI in Delhi Police, CBI & ASI (CISF) Exam, 12-03-2019 (Shift-I)

Tutankhamun was an Egyptian pharaoh who was buried in a lavish tomb filled with gold artifacts in the Valley of the Kings. His tomb was discovered in 1922 by an archaeological team led by British Egyptologist Howard Carter.

The tomb was mostly intact, an extraordinary find given that most of the tombs in the Valley of the Kings had been looted in ancient times. But while Tutankhamun's tomb was lavish, historical and archaeological evidence indicates that the young pharaoh was sickly and spent his short rule trying to undo a religious revolution that his father had started.

Tutankhaten (as he was called at birth) was born around the year 1341 B.C. His father was the pharaoh Akhenaten, a revolutionary pharaoh who tried to focus Egypt's polytheistic religion around the worship of the sun disc, the Aten. In his fervor, Akhenaten ordered the names and images of other Egyptian deities to be destroyed or defaced.

Tutankhamun ascended to the throne around 1332 B.C. when he was about 9 years old. Given his young age he would have relied heavily on his advisers. At some point his name was changed to Tutankhamun, removing the word "aten" - a reminder of his father's religious revolution - from his name. Tutankhamun also condemned his father's actions in a stela (a stone with inscription) found at Karnak, saying that Akhenaten's religious revolution caused the gods to ignore Egypt. Part of the stela reads "the temples and the cities of the gods and the goddesses, starting from Elephantine as far as the Delta marshes... were fallen into decay and their shrines were fallen into ruin, having become mere mounds overgrown with grass... The gods were ignoring this land."

Archaeological evidence indicates that Tutankhamun suffered from ill health. A study of his remains published in 2010 found that he suffered from a variety of maladies, including malaria and Kohler disease (a rare bone disorder of the foot). A number of canes have been found in Tutankhamun's tomb, finds that support the idea that the pharaoh had difficulty walking at times.

It is not known what killed Tutankhamun. There have been numerous hypotheses put forward over the years. It has been suggested that he died from an infection caused by a broken leg or from injuries suffered in a chariot accident.

The boy king died in 1323 B.C. around the age of 18. His death was unexpected, and his tomb appears to have been finished quickly. Microbes found on the wall of the tomb indicate that the paint on the wall wasn't even dry when the tomb was sealed.

Howard Carter's team discovered the tomb's entranceway on November 4, 1922, and on November 26 they got inside.

While the treasures were incredible, the tomb was unusually small for a pharaoh's burial, containing only 110 square meters (1,184 square feet) of floor space. The tomb's small size may have been because the pharaoh died young and unexpectedly and there wasn't time to carve out a larger tomb.

- (2) The discovery of an incredible treasure
 - (3) The life and death of the boy Pharaoh
 - (4) The death of Tutankhamun and his burial
132. The discovery of a number of canes in the tomb indicates that Tutankhamun
- (1) suffered from an infection
 - (2) had difficulty in walking
 - (3) suffered from Malaria
 - (4) had fallen from a chariot

133. Tutankhamun's father was a revolutionary who wanted his revolution?
- (1) He wanted the Egyptians to worship one god, Aten.
 - (2) Egyptians were asked to have no religious god.
 - (3) Images and names of all the Egyptian deities were to be destroyed.
 - (4) He wanted his people to be polytheistic.

134. Tutankhamun had a short rule. Most of his time was used in:
- (1) looking after the well-being of his people
 - (2) erecting stelae at different places
 - (3) fighting with his own diseases
 - (4) trying to undo the religious revolution of his father

135. Which statement is NOT true according to the passage?
- (1) Tutankhamun's tomb was lavishly filled with gold artifacts.
 - (2) The tomb was unusually small for a pharaoh's burial.
 - (3) The tomb appears to have been finished quickly as the paint wasn't dry when it was sealed.
 - (4) Howard Carter's team discovered the tomb's entranceway on November 26, 1922.

SSC SI in Delhi Police, CBI & ASI (CISF) Exam, 13-03-2019 (Shift-I)

The much-awaited expansion of Delhi's Indira Gandhi International Airport is expected to begin by March-end. The airport operator has received three bids for the Rs. 9,000-crore project, two officials familiar with the matter said.

Two bids are from foreign companies while one is from an Indian firm. The airport operator, the GMR Group of Delhi International Airport Ltd (DIAL), is expected to finalize the bidder this week. After the announcement, the successful bidder is expected to take around two months to mobilise the workforce and begin expansion work.

The bid document says the selected company has to complete work in 42 months. All the three bidders are reported to have quoted 39 months, the sources said.

The expansion is aimed to meet the rapid traffic growth that has already made IGI Asia's seventh busiest airport. The selected company will work on the expansion of Terminal 1 and Terminal 3 and the construction of a new runway and taxiways. Roads leading to the airport will be widened and new approach roads will be built. The expansion expansion of the airport will start with Terminal 1 to be completed by 2021—taking the overall handling capacity of the airport to 85 million passengers per year from the current 70 million. It will be followed by phase 2 of the expansion, which includes construction of another brand new terminal.

Data released last year by Airports Council International showed that the passenger traffic at the Delhi Airport grew by 14 per cent year on year to 63.45 million in 2017. It was the first time it breached the 60-million passenger mark. In 2018, it was just below 70-million mark. The new air traffic control (ATC) tower, which will open in 2019, and the fourth runway, to be launched in 2021, would help it reduce air congestion and handle more flights.

Terminal 1 handles domestic traffic for low-cost carriers. These have registered a phenomenal growth in the last few years, calling for an expansion of the terminal. Delhi Metro under its phase 3 programme is connecting this terminal to catchment areas of central and south Delhi. Since T1 is operating beyond its capacity, the expansion will begin from there and cover the airside, terminal building and city side," said a DIAL official.

According to the Master Plan, T1's capacity will increase from 20 million to 40 million and that of Terminal 3 from 34 million to 45 million.

Inter-terminal connectivity through the Airport Metro between T1 and T3 is also part of the expansion plan.

DIAL has appointed AECOM, a design and development consultant for infrastructure projects, to complete the preliminary design for the expansion work.

136. From the reading of the paragraph it can be inferred that it is:

- (1) a news item
- (2) a survey report
- (3) an airport novel
- (4) a promotional article

137. The expansion of the airport will begin from:

- (1) Construction of a new terminal to handle the increasing load.
- (2) Terminal 3 which handles international traffic.
- (3) Construction of a new runway and taxiways.
- (4) Terminal 1 which handles fast growing domestic traffic.

138. In 2018, the number of passengers that the Delhi Airport handled was:

- (1) 63.45 million
- (2) 40 million
- (3) just below 70 million
- (4) 45 million

139. Which of the following measures will help the airport reduce air congestion and handle more flights from the time being?

- (1) building Inter-terminal connectivity between T1 and T3
- (2) construction of air control tower and a new runway
- (3) construction of taxiways and widening of approach roads
- (4) construction of a brand new terminal

140. Which agency has been appointed to prepare the design for the expansion of the Delhi airport?

- (1) Airports Council International
- (2) GMR group
- (3) AECOM
- (4) DIAL

Question No. (141-150):

SSC CGL Tier II (CBE) Exam 2018, 11-09-2019

The four-year tiger census report, Status of Tigers in India, 2018, released by Prime Minister Narendra Modi shows numbers of the cat have increased across all landscapes.

The Global Tiger Forum, an international collaboration of tiger-bearing countries, has set a goal of doubling the count of wild tigers by 2022. More than 80% of the world's wild tigers are in India, and it's crucial to keep track of their numbers.

The total count in 2018 has risen to 2,967 from 2,226 in 2014—an increase of 741 individuals an increase of 33% in four years.

This is by far the biggest increase in terms of both numbers and percentage since the four-yearly census using camera traps and the capture-mark-recapture method began in 2006. The 2018 figure has a great degree of credibility because, according to the report, as many as 2,461 individual tigers (83% of the total) have actually been photographed by trap cameras. In 2014, only 1,540 individuals (69%) were photographed.

The tiger census is needed because the tiger sits at the peak of the food chain, and its conservation is important to ensure the well-being of the forest ecosystem. The tiger estimation exercise includes habitat assessment and prey estimation. The numbers reflect the success or failure of conservation efforts. This is an especially important indicator in a fast-growing economy like India where the pressures of development often run counter to the demands of conservation.

Where has the tiger population increased the most?

The biggest increase has been in Madhya Pradesh—a massive 218 individuals (71%) from 308 in 2014 to 526.

However, since tigers keep moving between states, conservationists prefer to talk about tiger numbers in terms of landscapes.

So, why have the numbers gone up?

The success owes a lot to increased vigilance and conservation efforts by the Forest Department. From 28 in 2006, the number of tiger reserves went up to 50 in 2018, extending protection to larger numbers of tigers over the years. Healthy increases in core area populations eventually lead to migrations to areas outside the core, this is why the 2018 census has found tigers in newer areas. Over the years, there has been increased focus on tigers even in the areas under the territorial and commercial forestry arms of Forest Departments.

The other important reason is increased vigilance, and the fact that organized poaching rackets have been all but crushed. According to Nalin Desai of Wildlife Protection Society of India, there has been no organized poaching by traditional gangs in Central Indian Landscapes since 2013.

The increased protection has encouraged the tiger to breed. Tigers are fast breeders when conditions are conducive.

The rehabilitation of villages outside core areas in many parts of the country has led to the availability of more available space for tigers.

Also, because estimation exercises have become increasingly more accurate over the years, it is possible that many tigers that eluded enumerators in earlier exercises were counted this time.

(SSC CGL Tier-II (CBE) Exam-2018)
11.09.2019

A few years ago it seemed as if the moment for stand-up comedy had arrived. By the end of 2017, stand-up comedians were on the cover of a magazine, signaling the coming of age of the industry.

The stand-up game attracted investors in the night places, on platforms like Netflix and Amazon Prime. Two major companies Comedy Store and Canvas Laugh Club arrived on the scene and were game changers.

But despite a heady start, the comic landscape has changed drastically today with stand-up comedians facing the brunt of faltering payments and cancelled shows.

Despite a good start, the Indian stand-up industry is still unorganized and uncertain for comics.

If you ask viral comic Kunal Kamra about the scene, he says that the audience isn't really invested in the form at the moment and that only ten or twenty tickets would sell if comics weren't on the internet promoting themselves. And this is despite the surge in open mics and more stand-ups coming in.

Last year, new-age Indian comedy's reputation came under strain when allegations under the #MeToo movement exposed a darker side of the circuit. Since then, the big three comedy groups, All India Bakchod, SNG Comedy and East India Comedy, have either disbanded or had founding members quit.

Jeeya Sethi, a leading comedian says, "It's a good thing that these collectives have died because they mostly had men with no women being showcased."

Sethi adds saying that it isn't as easy as it sounds, "to be a fledgling industry, a viral YouTube Video isn't a sign that you've made it". Craft takes time. Every comic who does two open mics calls himself a comedian. In my opinion, you have to do comedy for more than 20 years to be a comic. It takes at least five years to find your voice."

151. By saying 'the audience has not invested in the stand-up comedy art form' the author means that

- (1) the audience prefers to watch only women comedians.

(SSC CGL Tier-II (CBE) Exam-2018)
11.09.2019

According to a new American study headed by Dr. Willis, it has been found that people who exercise in the morning seem to lose more weight than people completing the same workouts later in the day.

These findings help shed light on the vexing issue of why some people shed considerable weight with exercise and others almost none. The study adds to the growing body of science suggesting that the timing of various activities, including exercise, could affect how those activities affect us.

The relationship between exercise and body weight is somewhat befuddling. Multiple past studies show that a majority of people who take up exercise to lose weight drop fewer pounds than would be expected, given how many calories they are burning during their workouts.

Some gain weight. But a few respond quite well, shedding pound after pound with the same exercise regimen that prompts others to add inches.

The Midwest Trial 2, was conducted in the University of Kansas, U.S. on how regular, supervised exercise influences others body weight.

The trial involved 100 overweight, previously inactive young men and women who were made to work out five times a week at a physiology lab, jogging or otherwise sweating until they had burned up to 600 calories per session.

After 10 months of this regimen, almost everyone had dropped pounds. But the extent of their losses fluctuated wildly, even though everyone was doing the same, supervised workout. A team of researchers started brainstorming what could be responsible for the enormous variability in the weight loss.

They hit upon activity timing. They decided to do a Follow-up study of the Midwest Trial 2. In this new study the Midwest Trial 2 Follow up study the researchers now studied a team of participants who could visit the gym whenever they wished between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. They also tracked everyone's calorie intakes and daily movement habits throughout the 10 months. They knew too, whether and by how much people's weights had changed.

Now, they checked weight change against exercise schedules and quickly noticed a consistent pattern.

Those people who usually worked out before noon had lost more weight, on average, than the men and women who typically exercised after 3 p.m.

The researchers uncovered a few other, possibly relevant differences between the morning and late-day exercisers. The early-exercise group tended to be slightly more active throughout the day, taking more steps in total than those who worked out later. They also ate less.

These factors may cumulatively have contributed to the striking differences in how many pounds people lost, Dr. Willis says.

Thus, it seems that people who worked out before noon lost weight, on average, than those who typically exercised after 3 p.m.

But, Dr. Willis also points out that most of those who worked out later in the day did lose weight, even if not as much as the larkish exercisers, i.e. and almost certainly became healthier. "I would not want anyone to think that it's not worth exercising if you can't do it first thing in the morning," he says. "Any exercise, at any time of day is going to be better than none."

Question No. (166-170):

11.09.2019)

The United Kingdom's Social Mobility Commission study reports that disadvantaged children in England are being priced out of a cultural hinterland. Children aged 10-15 from low income families are three times less likely than wealthier peers to engage in out-of-school musical activities, such as learning an instrument, etc.

There were also differences according to race—4% of British Pakistani children took part in music classes, compared with 28% of Indian children and 20% of white children—and regional divides: 9% of children in north-east England played a musical instrument, compared to 22% in the south-east.

Disadvantaged children are also more likely to miss out on extracurricular sports (football, boxing, cricket) and drama, dance and art. The commission set out recommendations, including bursaries, better funding and support for schools—let's hope they're taken on board. As well as the activities themselves, children are missing out on other crucial gains including confidence-building, team spirit and social skill, and are less likely to go on to higher education.

Extracurricular activities tend to cost money, but there are also problems with a lack of availability and access, such as schools being unable to afford to run after-school clubs or stay open during holidays. Another barrier is the kids' "fear of not fitting in". In this sense, certain children are ill-equipped for learning an instrument, singing in a choir, playing a sport or acting. They develop themselves that they're "undeserving" of music, sports and drama. Unbelievably, in 2019, children as young as 10 are already hard-wired with the self-limiting perception of "not for the likes of us".

This is heartbreaking. It's hardly news that it's tougher for poorer children, but it's an outrage that it's so early. Something is wrong if better-off children feel entitled to explore and participate in areas that poorer children start as cultural wallflowers—doomed to sit out every day (but why not?). It's about sowing the seeds for a cultural hinterland that will sustain and enrich them for life. In circumstances, all children should know that their future "fit"—automatically and forever Culture belongs to everyone.

12.09.2019)

Nothing, not even the angry, red eruptions on her face and body, will stop Sneha from aiming for her "dream job". "I love the Indian Army," says the 18-year-old, as she sits by herself under one of the canopies at the Chhatrapati Shivaji Stadium of the Maratha Light Infantry Regimental Centre in Belagavi, Karnataka. Outside the enclosure, around 35 women run on the 400-m track.

A day earlier, Sneha had cleared her ground tests—a 1.6-km race that had to be completed in eight minutes or less, high jump and long jump—and physical fitness tests, when she was diagnosed with chickenpox. Now on medication for the pox, she is back at the stadium for a medical examination as part of the recruitment process. As she waits for her turn, isolated from the other women, Sneha, says, "I had no fever when I left home in Kerala. Even when I reached Belagavi and got these pimples, I did not think much of it. So I came for my physical and ground tests."

Accompanied by her mother and uncle, Sneha, who is pursuing a computer course in her hometown Itty, about 41 km from Kannur, made the 611-km journey from home to Belagavi spending eight hours in a bus and three hours on a train. She is among the 850-odd women, many of whom have travelled several hundred kilometers, to turn up at the first ever recruitment rally for women to the Indian Army's Corps of Military Police.

The recruitment of women as Soldier General Duty (Women Military Police) marks the first time that women will be taken in not only as officers, but as soldiers, giving them an opportunity to be involved in active military duties. As personnel of the military police, the women soldiers will be responsible for investigating offences such as molestation, theft, and rape, "assisting in the maintenance of good order and discipline," and in custody and handling of prisoners of war—essentially combat support operations.

The move is part of a slow opening up of avenues for women in the armed forces. In his Independence Day speech last year, Prime Minister Narendra Modi had said women officers recruited into the armed forces under the Short Service Commission would be given the option of taking up permanent commission—a "gift" to India's "brave daughters".

Following a notification issued by the Army on April 25, around 15,000 women registered for the recruitment rally at Belagavi, the first of five such to be held across India to fill 100 positions in the Military Police. The Belagavi centre catered to candidates from the southern states of Karnataka, Kerala, Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh and Telangana and the Union Territories of Lakshadweep, Andaman and Nicobar and Puducherry. Of the 15,000 aspirants, about 3,000 were short-listed on the basis of their class 10 marks, with the cut-off set at 86 per cent. Of the shortlisted candidates, only about one-third turned up at the Belagavi centre between August 1 and 5 at the date and time assigned to them, just then, outside the enclosure where Sneha is sitting, a shrill whistle pierces the air and another batch of girls takes off—feet on the wet ground, mostly bare, making a dash for their place in history. "Does everybody understand English?" asks Major Chaudhry and the group of 30 women, sitting on red carpets on the ground, bellows: "Yes"

ISSC CGL Tier II (ICB) Exam 2018

At a number of places in the Kashmir Valley, the forces have put coils of razor wire on roads to restrict movement. Concertina wire or razor wire fences are used along territorial borders and in areas of conflict around the world, to keep out combatants, terrorists or refugees.

The expandable spools of barbed or razor wire get their name from concertina, a hand-held musical instrument similar to the accordion, with bellows that expand and contract.

Concertina wire coils were an improvisation on the barbed wire obstacles used during World War I. The collapsible coils with intermittent barbs or blades were designed to be carried along by infantry, and deployed on battlefields to prevent or slow down enemy movement.

The Englishman Richard Newton is credited with creating the first barbed wire around 1845; the first patent was given to Louis Francois Janin of France. In the United States, the first patent was registered by Lucien B Smith on June 25, 1867 for a prairie fence made of fireproof iron cable of wires.

The American businessman Joseph F Glidden is considered to be the father of the modern barbed wire. He designed the wire with two intertwined strands held by sharp prongs at regular intervals.

Barbed wire was initially an agrarian fencing invention intended to confine cattle and sheep, which unlike lumber was largely resistant to fire and bad weather. An advertisement published in the US in 1885 under the title 'Why Barbed Fencing is Better Than Any Other', argued that 'it does not decay; boys cannot crawl through or over it; nor dogs nor cats; nor any other animal; it watches with Argus eyes the inside and outside, up, down and lengthwise; it prevents the 'ins' from being 'outs' and the 'outs' from being 'ins' watches at day-break, at noontide, at sunset and all night long...'

Barbed wire was put to military use in the Siege of Santiago in 1898 during the Spanish-American War and by the British in the second Boer War of 1899-1902 to confine the families of the Afrikaans-speaking Boer fighters.

World War I saw extensive use of barbed wire and German military engineers are credited with improvising the earliest concertina coils on the battlefield. They spun the barbed wire into circles and simply spread it on the battlefield. Without using any support infrastructure like poles etc. this was more effective against the infantry charge by Allied soldiers.

The fence erected by India along the Line of Control to keep out terrorist infiltrators consists of rows of concertina wire coils held by iron angles. They are now commonly seen and are used to secure private properties as well.

 12.09.2019

Last week, scientists from all corners of India descended on Ahmedabad to remember the architect of India's space programme, a man whom the late president, APJ Abdul Kalam, had famously termed 'Mahatma Gandhi of Indian Science'.

They were there to launch celebrations on the birth centenary of Vikram Sarabhai, 47 years after his death at the age of 52, by when he had founded 38 institutions that are now leaders in space research, physics, management and performing arts.

Former director of the Space Applications Centre Pramod Kale was a 19-year old science graduate from MS University of Baroda, besotted by space technology, when he first met Sarabhai. "In May 1960, I went to Ahmedabad to meet Dr. Sarabhai. I met him and ended up talking for two hours," Kale says.

By June that year, Kale had done exactly as Sarabhai had advised him and taken up a master's course at Gujarat University. In 1962, when Sarabhai was looking at studying the magnetic equator, Kale went on to be among the first few to go to NASA to learn radar tracking.

The room resounded with many such memories. Former ISRO chairman K Kasturirangan remembered how they ran into some trouble at the Physical Research Laboratory (PRL), founded in 1947 by Sarabhai, in their attempts to fly a balloon at 4 am, when in sailed Sarabhai. "He told us had the flight been successful, you would not have learnt even half of what you learnt because of that initial problem," said Kasturirangan.

Many of those who had collected in Ahmedabad in Sarabhai's memory were teenagers when they first met him. Gandhinagar-based entrepreneur K Subramanian was 19 and a student of National Institute of Technology, Trichirappalli, working on a summer project at PRL, when a man in a kurta-pyjama walked in and began turning all the wastepaper bins upside down inspecting their contents and putting them back again. "I asked a colleague who that was and was told it is Dr. Vikram Sarabhai. He had come to check how much waste the lab was generating," laughs Subramanian.

Born to Ambalal and Sarla Devi, Ahmedabad's leading textile-mill owners, Vikram Sarabhai showed creative promise early. He was 15 when he built a working model of a train engine with the help of two engineers, which is now housed at the Community Science Centre (CSC) in Ahmedabad. The CSC was Vikram's way to providing other children the privileges he had of experimental research, says his son Kartikeya, 71, adding how his father wished to work with children at the science centre after he retired.

"He was essentially a researcher, and believed that people, especially children, should be allowed to think freely and come up with solutions on their own," recalls Kartikeya, who founded the Centre for Environment Education in 1984. Kartikeya is carefully piecing together all the dog-eared notes he is discovering in the recesses of their three grand homes—Shanti Sadan, The Retreat and Chidambaram.

To inspire the young to dream like Sarabhai, Kartikeya is building a permanent exhibition gallery on the Sabarmati Riverfront, expected to open this November.

(SSC CGL Tier-II (CBE) Exam-2018, 12.09.2019)

A great water scarcity looms over India, by 2025 Indians will get just over half the water they get today. This grave problem has a simple solution. Catch the rain as it falls and the water crisis will disappear. However, about 80 per cent of India's rainfall buckets down during the three months of the monsoons. As yet no government programme has discovered how to store this water.

'Dying Wisdom', a seven-year countryside study by Delhi's Centre for Science and Environment, reveals that ruins of amazing ancient technologies survive in every corner of India. Drip-irrigation systems of bamboo pipes in Meghalaya; 'kunds', underground tanks in Rajasthan; 'pynes', water channels built by tribals in Bihar and thousands of open-water bodies down south are all superb examples of rain water harvesting systems. Even today, tanks called 'eris' in Tamil Nadu water one-third of the state.

Unfortunately, government planners mostly refuse to acknowledge the potential of these low cost systems, concentrating on costly dams and canals.

Few cities have lost touch with their ecological traditions as fast and with as damaging results as Bangalore. Only 17 of its water bodies struggle to survive in a city where 200 lakes, ponds and wetlands cooled the city and recharged its ground water. The threats continue unabated as the relentless march of urbanization shows no sign of stopping.

Meanings of difficult words/phrases.

loom over : to appear, esp. when seeming large and threatening.

Dust storms of May 2018, in Northern India, contributed to the deteriorating air quality in the region and the capital city of Delhi, with implications for human health, a study found. The high death toll from the severe dust storms that lashed the region was mainly attributed to the intense winds, which surprised even scientists and meteorologists. But apart from the immediate damage to life and property, drastic changes in air quality from the dust engulfing the region affected far more people with potential implications for human health, stated a team of researchers who analysed the impact of the spell of dust storms that struck the region that month. They reported increases in particulate matter, mainly in Delhi and urged for an early warning system.

Dust storms commonly occur in the Indo-Gangetic Plains – the fertile plains in northern India that stretch all the way to the East – from March to May, the pre-monsoon season. Westerly winds typically bring loose sand and soil particles, picked up from the Arabian Peninsula or the Thar Desert in North Western India, to the Indo-Gangetic Plains. The dust tends to worsen air quality over the Indo-Gangetic Plains, home to around 900 million people, which can have far-reaching effects on human health. While dust storms are a regular feature in the region, the May 2018 dust storms specifically had a death toll of about 100 people, with around 200 people injured.

"We are concerned that the dust impacts the health of people who get exposed," said a senior professor. However, he also observed that scattered rains occurring soon after the dust storms tend to clean up the dust, improving air quality. During October-November, densely populated cities like Delhi and Kanpur in the Indo-Gangetic Plains are vulnerable to windborne long-range air pollution from crop residue burning in the North, and now this study "shows the effect of dust storms during the March-May time frame," Sarkar pointed out. "This really puts the Indo-Gangetic valley in a unique spot in terms of it being targeted by these different hazardous conditions which are mostly outsourced from other areas."

Parents all over Iceland's capital Reykjavik embark on a two-hour evening walk around their neighbourhood every weekend, checking on youth hangouts as the 10 pm curfew approaches. The walk in Reykjavik is one step toward Iceland's success into turning around a crisis in teenage drinking.

Focusing on local participation and promoting more music and sports options for students, the island nation in the North Atlantic has dried up a teenage culture of drinking and smoking. Icelandic teenagers now have one of the lowest rates of substance abuse in Europe.

The Icelandic Centre for Social Research and Analysis, the institute pioneering the project for the past two decades, says it currently advises 100 communities in 23 countries, from Finland to Chile, on cutting teenage substance abuse. "The key to success is to create healthy communities and by that get healthy individuals", said Inga Dora Sigfusdottir, a sociology professor who founded the Youth of Iceland programme, which now has been rebranded as Planet Youth.

The secret, she says, is to keep young people busy and parents engaged without talking much about drugs or alcohol. That stands in sharp contrast to other anti-abuse programmes, which try to sway teenagers with school lectures and scary, disgusting ads showing smokers' rotten lungs or eggs in a frying pan to represent an intoxicated brain.

"Telling teenagers not to use drugs can backlash and actually get them curious to try them," Ms Sigfusdottir said. In 1999, when thousands of teenagers would gather in Reykjavik every weekend, surveys showed 56% of Icelandic 16-year-olds drank alcohol and about as many had tried smoking.

Years later, Iceland has the lowest rates for drinking and smoking among the 35 countries measured in the 2015 European School Survey Project on Alcohol and Other Drugs.

On average, 80% of European 16-year-olds have drunk alcohol at least once, compared with 35% in Iceland, and only country where more than half of those students completely abstains from alcohol.

Denmark, another wealthy Nordic country, has the highest rates of teenage drinking, along with Greece, Hungary and the Czech Republic, where 92% to 96% have consumed alcohol.

In the US, teen drinking is a significant health concern, because many US teenagers are driving cars and don't have access to good public transport like teenagers in Europe.

Reykjavik mayor Dagur B. Eggertsson said the Icelandic plan "is all about society giving better options" for teens from substance abuse. He believes the wide variety of opportunities that now keep students busy and inspired has dramatically altered the country's youth culture.

Local municipalities like Reykjavik have invested in sport halls, music schools and youth centres. To make the programmes widely available, parents are offered a 500 US dollar annual voucher toward sports or music programmes for their children.

Researchers say the Planet Youth prevention model is evolving constantly because it is based on annual surveys to detect trends and measure policy effectiveness. By law, fuelled street gatherings, children under 12 are not allowed to be outside after 8pm without parents and those 13 to 16 not past 10pm.

"We tell the kids if they are out too late, polite and nice, and then they go home," said Heidar Atlason, a veteran member of the patrol. Over Iceland's harsh winter, one parent admits, evenings sometimes pass without running into any students.

Mount Everest, the world's highest peak at 8,848 metres, draws adventurers from all over. But the mountain on the Nepal-China border is fast becoming a dangerous place to visit even for the hardened mountaineer. The inherent risks were highlighted with a photograph by Nirmal Purja, a Gorkha ex-soldier. The image, which went viral and altered the manner in which people worldwide imagine what it is to scale Mt. Everest, showed a long queue awaiting a final tilt at the summit, with all the dangers such a wait holds. In the 2019 season, at least 11 climbers have died or gone missing, including four Indians. Experts have been calling for Nepal to restrict the number of permits. It awarded a record 381 for this spring each fetching $11,000 (climbing from the Tibet side is more expensive). On 22nd May, 200 climbers ascended the summit, a new record for a single day. Last year, 807 managed to reach the summit. In 2012, the United Nations estimated that there were more than 26,000 visitors to the Everest region, and this figure has grown manifold since then. Nepal officials argue that permits are not issued recklessly, and that jams such as this year's near the summit are on account of spells of bad weather, which result in mountaineers being compelled to reach the summit within a narrow time frame. Waiting in sub-zero temperatures at rarefied altitude can be fatal-this season's deaths were mostly due to frostbite, exhaustion, dehydration and lack of oxygen.

This year's drama has caught public imagination, as happened in 1996 when eight persons died in a single day amid an unexpected storm - events of and around that day were the subject of Jon Krakauer's bestselling book 'Into Thin Air'. The adventure industry that is built around the human desire to scale the peak has meant many amateurs take up the challenge, confident that support teams and specialized equipment will make up for their lack of adequate mountaineering experience. The fallout is that in case of a disaster not only are some of them unable to manage but they also hold up others, putting them in harm's way. The commercial operations have led to the Everest being called the world's highest garbage dump as many climbers discard non-critical gear, used oxygen cylinders, plastic bottles, cans, batteries, food wrappings, fecal matter and kitchen waste on the mountains. It is unlikely, however, that this season's tragedies will deter future summiteers, as the hypnotic lure remains intact. But the authorities must learn from this year's tragedies and work out an optimum number of climbers and strengthen safety measures.

Brain training is big business. From online websites to video games to mobile apps, it seems like there are plenty of ways to give your brain a bit of a boost. But does all this brain training really work? Can it increase your cognitive abilities or your IQ? According to a few recent studies, while these brain training tools might help sharpen your abilities to retain information, they won't necessarily increase your intelligence or improve your ability to reason and think abstractly.

The parent company of one of the most prominent "brain training" websites was recently fined for deceptive advertising. According to the complainant, the company suggested its games could reduce or delay cognitive impairment such as one might find in Alzheimer's patients, which is false.

So while there may be some benefits to brain training, don't expect miraculous results. Earlier studies have found no link between increased intelligence and brain training exercises.

Same is the case with standardized tests. Students today take a wide variety of standardized tests, from assessments throughout elementary school to evaluations required for college admission. While test preparation for such assessments can increase factual knowledge, one study suggests that this preparation does little to increase overall IQ.

Why is it so? While test preparation increases what psychologists refer to as crystallized intelligence, it does not increase what is known as fluid intelligence. Crystallized intelligence includes facts and information, while fluid intelligence involves the ability to think abstractly or logically. In a study published in the journal Psychological Science, researchers looked at the IQ scores and test scores of approximately 1,400 eighth-grade students. While schoolwork improved increase the students' test scores, it had no effect on measures of fluid intelligence. The authors suggest that fluid intelligence is a much better indicator of abilities such as problem-solving ability, abstract thinking skills, memory capacity, and processing speed.

While the study found no indicator that test preparation improved IQ, that does not mean that this preparation has no value. Research clearly shows that having high scores on standardized tests is linked to having high scores on other important tests including Advanced Placement tests, the SAT etc.

Meanings of difficult words/phrases:

cognitive (Adjective): connected with thinking or conscious mental processes.

deceptive (Adjective): giving an appearance or impression different from the true one; misleading.

abstractly (Adverb): in a general way and not based on particular examples.

impairment (Noun): the state or fact of being impaired (the act of spoiling something or making it weaker so that it is less effective).

Alzheimer → a progressive disease that destroys memory and other important mental functions.

226. In the passage, give your brain a bit of a boost means to

- increase its ability to grow stronger.
- be able to play video games.
- increase its size.
- sharpen it.

227. What do brain training tools do?

- Enable you to retain information.
- Sharpen the ability to think clearly.
- Increase intelligence.
- Improve problem-solving abilities.

228. A brain training site was fined for

- making false claims.
- causing Alzheimer's disease.
- helping improve learning ability.
- decreasing intelligence.

229. On comparing crystallized intelligence and fluid intelligence it is found that

- students have better fluid intelligence and perform better because of schoolwork and standardized test.
- crystallized intelligence helps in making you think with a logical mind gives you better test scores.
- fluid intelligence is what gives a learner skills such as problem-solving and processing of information.
- crystallized intelligence is better because it helps you learn facts and information.

230. From the passage one can arrive at the conclusion that both brain training and standardized tests

- do not really increase overall IQ and mental abilities.
- sharpen logical thinking through intensive training.
- increase brain functioning and performance.
- make you more intelligent and get better results.

The excitement of bird watchers on spotting a particular species for the very first time is unparalleled. With eyes shining and pride bursting, they exclaim, "I had a lifer today", or "It was a lifer for me." For the longest time, I couldn't fathom what all the fuss was about. I mean, at some point in their lives, even a crow or mynah would have been a lifer seen for the very first time. So, here, I've done a bit of juggle with the term and define it as a bird that you see maybe (but not necessarily) for the first time, but which has made a lasting, life-changing impact on you. Then I recalled some of my own "lifers".

Number 1 is the little copper-smith barbet. The first bird I saw through brand new, big and powerful binoculars and it was solely responsible for my getting interested in birds. The fellow looked like a tubby little clown with hiccups and that just blew me away.

I will never forget the first time I saw grey hornbills aeons ago, over sullen grey skies in the Borivli National Park (now called Sanjay Gandhi National Park) squealing as they flew high up across the sky. They looked as if they had just left Jurassic Park. Or, for that matter, their larger, more glamorous, cousins-Great pied hornbills. Tramping through a streambed in Kalagarh (near Corbett), we suddenly heard this rasping, whooshing sound. Up there, in the clear blue, were six-seven huge black-and-white birds with colossal yellow beaks flying in tandem across the clear blue sky, their wings making the rasping sound. Say "paradise flycatcher" and a birder's eyes will begin to glint: "Where? When? Will it be there now?" are questions that will be shot out like machine-gun bullets. The first time I saw a full grown malk-white-and-glossy-black male, with its glamorous 18-inch streamer tail, was at the Sultanpur National Park in Haryana. But I remember better the flycatchers, that made me run around in a tea garden in Palampur, teasingly whistling at me from one end to the other. The nesting pair in Naukuchital was more accommodating except that I had to stand knee-deep in the hotel's garbage dump to get a good view of them flitting to and fro the gully nearby. To compensate, one actually flew nearly down to my feet to snatch up a bluebottle I had missed.

Of course, there have been rarities: the highlight of the regular Bharatpur (the Keoladeo National Park) visits was the darshan of VIP Siberian cranes. Then they stopped coming, which was a first indication of their slow extinction, even if it was just "local" to our area. The gloriously uppity Great Indian bustards in the Karera Sanctuary (Madhya Pradesh) were another unforgettable sighting. The sheer disdain with which they flounced away from our howling, jolting jeep and took to their wings was a lesson in being

No one can look back on his schooldays and say with truth that they were altogether unhappy. I have good memories of St Cyprian's, among a horde of bad ones. Sometimes on summer afternoons there were wonderful expeditions across the Downs to a village called Birling Gap, or to Beachy Head, where one bathed dangerously among the boulders and came home covered with cuts. And there were still more wonderful mid-summer evenings when, as a special treat, we were not driven off to bed as usual but allowed to wander about the grounds in the long twilight, ending up with a plunge into the swimming bath at about nine o'clock. There was the joy of waking early on summer mornings and getting in an hour's undisturbed reading (Ian Hav. Thackeray, Kipling and H. G. Wells were the favourite authors of my boyhood) in the sunlit, sleeping dormitory. There was also cricket, which I was no good at but with which I conducted a sort of hopeless love affair up to the age of about eighteen. And there was the pleasure of keeping caterpillars — the silky green and purple puss-moth, the ghostly green poplar hawk, the privet hawk, large as one's third finger, specimens of which could be illicitly purchased for sixpence at a shop in the town — and, when one could escape long enough from the master who was 'taking the walk', there was the excitement of dredging the dew-ponds on the Downs for enormous newts with orange-coloured bellies. This business of being out for a walk, coming across something of fascinating interest and then being dragged away from it by a yell from the master, like a dog jerked onwards by the leash, is an important feature of school life, and helps to build up the conviction, so strong in many children, that the things you most want to do are always unattainable.

- (1) disobedient student
 (2) lonely child
 (3) mischievous boy
 (4) studious boy

253. "where one bathed dangerously" — Why does the writer call the bathing dangerous?
 (1) they were punished later
 (2) there were snakes in the water
 (3) the boulders gave them bruises
 (4) the water was too deep
254. What is the 'moral' the boy draws from his childhood experiences?
 (1) Things you enjoy doing are always unattainable
 (2) Only do the things your masters tell you to
 (3) Do not walk alone in the grounds
 (4) Do not collect insects like caterpillars
255. Which of the following did the boys not do on summer mornings?

Our civilization is more secure because it is much more widely spread. Most of the previous civilizations came to an end because uncivilized peoples broke in and destroyed Greece and Rome. Previous civilizations were specialized and limited like an oasis in a surrounding desert of savagery. Eventually, the desert closed in and the oasis was no more. But to-day, it is the oasis which is spreading over the desert. Practically no part of the world is untouched by it. For the first time, the world has now a chance of becoming a single whole, a unity. To-day, the food we eat comes from all over the world. The things in a grocer's shop are from the ends of the earth. There are oranges from Brazil, grapes from Africa, rice from India, tea from China, sugar from Columbia etc.

To-day the world is beginning to look more like one enormous box. Therefore, there is little danger upon our civilization from outside. The danger comes only from within. It is a danger from among us.

To-day, the sharing-out of money — the sharing-out of food, clothing, houses and books, is still very unfair. In England alone, in sharing out of the National Income, we find that one half is divided among every sixteen people and the seventeenth person gets the other half. So while some few people live in luxury, many have not even enough to eat and drink and wear. Again, in England to-day, thousands of people live in dreadful surroundings. There are many families of five or six persons who live in a single room; in this same room they are born and in this same room they die, because, they are too poor to afford another room. Until everyone gets his proper share of necessary and delightful things, our civilization will not be perfect.

The children were to be driven, as a special treat, to the sands at Jagborough. Nicholas was not to be of the party; he was in disgrace. Only that morning he had refused to eat his wholesome bread-and-milk on the seemingly frivolous ground that there was a frog in it. Older and wiser and better people (his aunt), had told him that there could not possibly be a frog in his bread-and-milk and that he was not to talk nonsense; he continued, nevertheless, to talk what seemed complete nonsense, and described with much detail the coloration and markings of the alleged frog. The dramatic part of the incident was that there really was a frog in Nicholas's basin of bread-and-milk; he had put it there himself, so he felt entitled to know something about it. The sin of taking a frog from the garden and putting it into a bowl of wholesome bread-and-milk was enlarged on at great length, but the fact that stood out clearest in the whole affair, as it presented itself to the mind of Nicholas, was that the older, wiser, and better people had been proved to be profoundly in error in matters about which they had expressed the utmost assurance.

"You said there couldn't possibly be a frog in my bread-and-milk; there was a frog in my bread-and-milk," he repeated, with the insistence of a skilled tactician who does not intend to shift from favourable ground.

261. What was the aunt trying to tell Nicholas?
 (1) That he should play with his cousins
 (2) That he would be punished if he misbehaved
 (3) That he should have eaten the bread and milk
 (4) That he could choose to stay back if he wished
262. What excuse did Nicholas give for not eating his bread and milk?

- (1) there was a frog in it
 (2) he did not like it
 (3) there was no sugar in it
 (4) it was too cold to eat
263. What made Nicholas so sure about what he said?
 (1) He noticed it jumping in
 (2) He saw someone putting it in
 (3) His cousins had told him about it
 (4) He himself had put it in
264. Why did Nicholas consider his aunt had been proved to be wrong?
 (1) She was forcing him to eat the bread and milk.
 (2) She had said there was no frog in the bowl
 (3) She never listened to him
 (4) She always scolded him
265. The children were being taken on a special treat to
 (1) The circus (2) The zoo
 (3) A garden (4) The beach

(SSC CAPFs SI, Delhi Police SI & CISF ASI Exam, 12.12.2019(Shift-III))

Pollution befalls the air and poisons water. Pollution induces the release of toxicants into the biosphere which makes the air unsuitable for breathing, harms the quality of water and soil, and causes the emission of substances that may cause damage to humans, plants and animals.

To cater to the needs of an increasing population, agriculture has been intensified through the use of a wide spectrum of fertilizers and pesticides. Diverse industries have been set up to produce chemicals including those that pose a danger to all life forms.

Rapid industrialisation has led to deterioration in the quality of air. Widespread use of coal and fossil fuels in industries and petroleum fuel in motor vehicles has aggravated the air pollution problem. Our atmosphere seems to have become a waste basket into which dust, noxious fumes, toxic gases and other pollutants are callously thrown.

The intensity of air pollution in Indian cities is increasing primarily due to our vintage vehicles and their poor performance. Water pollution, too has increased with the growth of our population and also that of our industries. Water pollution has acquired dangerous dimensions ever since sewage and industrial effluents have started being disposed of into the rivers. Once considered sacred, the rivers are now turning murky and stunk. It is sad that almost three-fourths of our fellow citizens have no choice but to drink filthy water. The severely polluted rivers due to mindless dumping of sewage and industrial wastes are a cause for concern not only to us humans but also to myriads of life forms that exist in water. On the French and Italian rivers, the Mediterranean Sea is reported to be turning grey. Rivers and canals pour sewage, detergents and industrial waste into the sea, tankers flush their contents near the river or sea; bottles, rotting garbage and oil slicks are washed into the beaches. The phosphates and nitrates applied to farmlands as inorganic fertilizers, concentrate in lakes and estuaries causing algal blooms due to which wide expanses of water get choked, plants rot, oxygen is used up and fish die.

266. Which of the following factors is responsible for algal blooms?

- (1) Concentration of inorganic fertilizers in lakes
- (2) Farmlands being located near lakes and estuaries
- (3) Using up of oxygen dissolved in the water by algae
- (4) Rotting of aquatic plants in lakes and estuaries

267. Select the most appropriate title for the passage.

- (1) Algal Blooms
- (2) We Breathe and Drink Poison
- (3) The Saga of Sacred Rivers
- (4) Impact of Industrialisation

268. Since when has water pollution acquired dangerous dimensions?

- (1) Since sewage and industrial effluents started being disposed of in rivers
- (2) Since oil slicks started being washed on the shores of beaches
- (3) Since sacred rivers became murky and lost their sanctity
- (4) Since the Mediterranean Sea started changing colour

269. Deterioration in the quality of air can mainly be attributed to

- (1) global climate change
- (2) intensified agricultural practices
- (3) increase in population
- (4) rapid industrialisation

270. As per the passage, which of these statements is NOT true about air pollution?

- (1) Vintage vehicles and their poor performance adds to pollution.
- (2) Use of coal and fossil fuels aggravates air pollution.
- (3) Three-fourths of our citizens are breathing poor quality air.
- (4) Dust and toxic gases released in the air cause air pollution.

Since September, at least 25 people have died and thousands have been made homeless. Every state and territory in Australia has experienced fires this summer. But the biggest fires burn along stretches of the eastern and southern coast, where most of the population lives. This includes areas around Sydney and Adelaide.

More than 6.3 million hectares (63,000 sq km or 15.6 million acres) have been burned so far one hectare is roughly the size of a sports field. To put that in perspective, around 800,000 hectares were engulfed in a bush fire in 2018 in California.

Australia has always experienced bushfires it has a 'fire season'. But this year they are a lot worse than normal.

Fires are usually caused by lightning strikes or accidentally by a spark but some fires are also started deliberately. This year, a natural weather phenomenon known as the 'Indian Ocean Dipole' has meant a hot, dry, spell across the country. This year, Australia twice set a new temperature record: an average maximum of 41.9°C was recorded on 18 December.

That comes on top of a long period of drought. Scientists have long warned that this hotter, drier climate will contribute to fires becoming more frequent and more intense.

The more extreme weather patterns and higher temperature increase the risk of bushfires and allow them to spread faster and wider.

Fire fighters are spraying water and fire retardant from planes and helicopters as well as from the ground. But fighting bush fires is extremely difficult and often authorities have to focus on just stopping the spread, rather than putting the fire out. The spread can for instance be best contained by digging earth boundaries to stop the flames from spreading. The priority is saving lives.

Professional fire fighters are the first in line to battle the flames, but they are outnumbered by the thousands of volunteers. Three of them have died. There's also help coming from abroad: the US, Canada and New Zealand have sent fire fighters to help. Australia's police, military and navy are involved in rescue and evacuation efforts.

While people can flee the fires and are being evacuated if need be, the flames are devastating wildlife in the affected areas. One study estimated that half a billion animals have died in New South Wales alone.

Zookeepers take animals home to save them from fire, but the fires don't only kill animals directly, they also destroy the habitat, leaving the survivors vulnerable even yet clear.

Experts say more than 100,000 cows and sheep may also have been lost, which is devastating for farmers.

Each state runs its own emergency operation, but Prime Minister Scott Morrison has promised better funding for fire-fighting and payouts for volunteer fire fighters, and an additional A$2 billion ($1.4 billion; £1 billion) for the recovery.

But the national government has come under strong criticism from its opponents that it has not been doing enough against climate change. The country is one of the world's biggest per capita greenhouse gas emitters but under international agreements it has committed itself to reduction targets.

(SSC CGL Tier-II Exam - 15-11-2020)

The Celts who lived in Britain before the Roman invasion of 43 AD could be said to have created the first towns. Celts in southern England lived in hill forts, which were quite large settlements. (Some probably had thousands of inhabitants). They were places of trade, where people bought and sold goods and also places where craftsmen worked. The Romans called them oppida.

However, the Romans created the first settlements that were undoubtedly towns. Roman towns were usually laid out in a grid pattern. In the centre was the forum or market place. It was lined with public buildings. Life in Roman towns was highly civilized with public baths and temples.

From the 5th century Angles, Saxons and Jutes invaded England. At first, the invaders avoided living in towns. However, as trade grew some towns grew up. London revived by the 7th century (although the Saxon town was, at first, outside the walls of the old Roman town). Southampton was founded at the end of the 7th century. Hereford was founded in the 8th century. Furthermore, Ipswich grew up in the 8th century and York revived.

However, towns were rare in Saxon England until the late 9th century. At that time, Alfred the Great created a network of fortified settlements across his kingdom called 'burhs'. In the event of a Danish attack, men could gather in the local burh. However, burhs were more than forts. They were also market towns. Some burhs were started from scratch but many were created out of the ruins of old Roman towns. Place like Winchester rose, phoenix-like, from the ashes of history.

The thing that would strike us most about medieval towns would be their small size. Winchester, the capital of England, probably had about 8,000 people. At that time a 'large' town, like Lincoln or Dublin had about 4,000 or 5,000 inhabitants and a 'medium sized' town, like Colchester had about 2,500 people. Many towns were much smaller.

However, during the 12th and 13th centuries most towns grew much larger. Furthermore, many new towns were created across Britain. Trade and commerce were increasing and there was a need for new towns. Some were created from existing villages but some were created from scratch. In those days you could create a town simply by starting a market. There were few shops so if you wished to buy or sell anything you had to go to a market. Once one was up and running, craftsmen and merchants would come to live in the area and a town would grow.

The giraffe is the tallest land mammal alive. Its long legs and neck contributing to its impressive stature. Males can be up to 18ft. (5.5m tall), females a little less.

In the wild, these beautiful, creatures stretch their necks beyond those of antelope, kudu and even elephants to strip leaves from the untouched upper reaches of trees.

The French zoologist Jean-Baptiste Lamarck is usually credited as the first person to suggest that long necks have evolved in giraffes because they allow them to get to the parts other herbivores, cannot reach.

As the giraffe lives 'in places where the soil is nearly always arid and barren, it is obliged to browse on the leaves of trees and to make constant efforts to reach them,' he wrote in his 1809 book 'Philosophie Zoologique'. 'From this habit long maintained in all its race, it has resulted that the animal's fore-legs have become longer than its hind legs, and that its neck is lengthened.'

The English naturalist Charles Darwin also thought the giraffe's extraordinary legs and neck must have something to do with foraging. The giraffe by its lofty stature, much elongated neck, fore-legs, head and tongue, has its whole frame beautifully adapted for browsing on the higher branches of trees,' he wrote in 'On the Origin of Species' in 1859.

In short, giraffe's long necks are the result of generation upon generation or repeated stretching and inheritance.

During the dry season when feeding competition should be most intense giraffes generally feed from low shrubs, not tall trees. What's more, giraffes feed most often and faster with their necks bent.

Male giraffes often fight for access to females, a ritual referred to as "necking". The rivals stand flank to flank, then start to whack each other with their heads. The top of the neck, chest, ribs, or legs of the opponent with a force capable of knocking a competitor off balance or unconscious.

The largest males usually win these battles and do most of the breeding, says zoologist Anne Innis Dagg of the University of Waterloo in Ontario, Canada, who has been studying giraffe since the 1950s. "The other giraffes don't get much, breeding opportunity."

There is also evidence that females are more receptive to advances from larger males.

The stark observation made in the Economic Survey of 2015-16 that "Indian agriculture, is in a way, a victim of its own past success- especially the green revolution", shows the dark reality of the agriculture sector at present and the havoc that has been wreaked by the green revolution.

The green revolution, which is often characterised by the introduction of high-yielding variety of seeds and fertilisers, undoubtedly increased the productivity of land considerably. But the growth in the productivity has been stagnant in recent years, resulting in a significant decline in the income of farmers. There have also been negative environmental effects in the form of depleting water table, emission of greenhouse gases, and the contamination of surface and ground water. Needless to say, the agriculture sector is in a state of distress, which is severely affecting peasants and marginal farmers, and urgent policy interventions are required to protect their interests.

The government has responded to the problem by constituting a panel, which will recommend ways to double the income of farmers by 2022. While this may be an extremely ambitious target, if we want to boost stagnated agricultural growth a shift has to be made from food security of the nation to income security of the farmers. However, there are many hurdles that have to be crossed if we want to achieve this objective.

The first major barrier to overcome is declining productivity. Data from 2013 reveals that India's average yield of cereal per hectare is far less than that of many countries (including several low income countries), but the difference is huge when compared to China. For instance, our average yield per hectare is 39% below that of China and for rice this figure is 46%. Even Bangladesh, China and Indonesia fare better than India in case of rice yield. Further, there is a huge inter-regional variation: the wheat and rice yield from Haryana and Punjab is much higher than from the other states.

In order to cross the declining productivity barrier there is a need to herald a rainbow revolution by making a shift from wheat-rice cycle to other cereals and pulses. Since wheat and rice coupled with other crops are backed by Minimum Support Price (MSP) and input subsidy (whether water, fertiliser or power) regime, there is a huge incentive for the farmers in the irrigated region of Northwest India to grow these crops.

296. As per the passage, which country has the highest yield of rice per hectare ?

- Vietnam
- Bangladesh
- China
- Indonesia

297. Which statement is NOT true according to the passage ?

- High yielding seeds and fertilizers were a hallmark of green revolution.
- The rice yield in India is below that of China by 39%.
- The growth in productivity has stagnated today.
- In Northwest India, farmers get subsidies on rice, wheat and other crops.

298. What does the author suggest to enhance the income to the farmers ?

- Constitute a panel to suggest ways to double the income.
- Provide income security to the farmers.
- Give subsidies on water, fertilizers and power.
- Shift wheat - rice cycle to include other cereals and pulses.

299. The purpose of this passage is to :

- suggest measures for improving the farmers lot.
- talk about the consequences of the green revolution.
- compare Indian agri-culture with that of other countries.
- express the anguish of the farmers.

300. As per the passage, what is the main cause of decline in the income of farmers?

- Emission of greenhouse gases.
- Decline in agricultural production.
- Depleting water table.
- Contamination of ground water.

Plato is the earliest important educational thinker, and education is an essential element in 'The Republic' (his most important work on philosophy and political theory, written around 360 B.C). In it, he advocates some rather extreme methods: removing children from their mothers care and raising them as wards of the state, and differentiating children suitable to the various castes, the highest receiving the most education, so that they could act as guardians of the city and care for the less able. He believed that education should be holistic, including facts, skills, physical discipline, music and art. Plato believed that talent and intelligence is not distributed genetically and thus is found in children born to all classes, although his proposed system of selective public education for an educated minority of the population does not really follow a democratic model.

Aristotle considered human nature, habit and reason to be equally important forces to be cultivated in education, the ultimate aim of which should be to produce good and virtuous citizens. He proposed that teachers lead their students systematically, and that repetition be used as a key to develop good habits, unlike Socrates emphasis on questioning his listeners to bring out their own ideas. He emphasized the balancing of the theoretical and practical aspects of subjects taught, among which he explicitly mentions reading, writing, mathematics, music, physical education, literature, history, and a wide range of sciences, as well as play, which he also considered important.

301. Which of these methods is NOT advocated in 'The Republic'?

- Differentiating children based on castes.
- Imparting similar education to all children.
- Bringing up children under state guardianship.
- Keeping children away from mothers.

302. Aristotle believed that virtuous citizens could be produced by cultivating:

- art and music
- mathematics and science
- theoretical aspects of education
- habit and reason

303. What tool does Aristotle advocate to teachers to develop good habits in students?

- Reading
- Questioning
- Repetition

304. Children who are imparted highest education, would be responsible for:

- developing talent and skills
- inculcating good habits
- guarding the city
- teaching the illiterate

305. Which of these statements is NOT true?

- (1) Socrates encouraged the listeners to come up with original ideas.
- (2) 'The Republic' was written around 360 A.D.
- (3) Socrates considered music and physical education as important aspects of learning.
- (4) Plato's methods of education can be called 'extreme'.

Chanhudaro was a tiny settlement (less than 7 hectares) as compared to Mohenjodaro (125 hectares), almost exclusively devoted to craft production, including bead-making, shell-cutting, metal-working, seal-making and weight-making. The variety of materials used to make beads is remarkable: stones like carnelian (of beautiful red colour), jasper, crystal, quartz and steatite; metals like copper, bronze and gold; and shell, faience and terracotta or burnt clay. Some beads were made of two or more stones, cemented together, some of stone with gold caps. The shapes were numerous-disc shaped, cylindrical, spherical, barrel-shaped, segmented. Some were decorated by incising or painting, and some had designs etched onto them.

Techniques for making beads differed according to the material. Steatite, a very soft stone, was easily worked. Some beads were moulded out of a paste made with steatite powder. This permitted making a variety of shapes, unlike the geometrical forms made out of harder stones. How the steatite micro bead was made remains a puzzle for archaeologists studying ancient technology. Archaeologists' experiments have revealed that red colour of carnelian was obtained by firing the yellowish raw material and beads at various stages of production. Nodules were chipped into rough shapes, and then finely flaked into the final form. Grinding, polishing and finally drilling completed the process. Specialised drills have been found at Chanhudaro, Lothal and more recently at Dholavira. Nageshwar and Balakot, both settlements are near the coast. These were specialised centres for making shell objects-including bangles, ladles and inlay-which were taken to other settlements. Similarly, it is likely that finished products (such as beads) from Chanhudaro and Lothal were taken to the large urban centres such as Mohenjodaro and Harappa.

Santiniketan embodies Rabi-dranath Tagore's vision of a place of learning that is unfettered by religious and regional barriers. Established in 1863 with the aim of helping education go beyond the confines of the classroom, Santiniketan grew into the Visva Bharati University in 1921, attracting some of the most creative minds in the country.

He developed a curriculum that was a unique blend of art, human values and cultural interchange. Even today in every step, in every brick and in every tree at Santiniketan, one can still feel his presence his passion, his dedication and his pride in the institution.

In 1862, Maharishi Debendranath Tagore, father of Rabindranath, was taking a boat ride through Birbhum, the westernmost corner of Bengal, when he came across a landscape that struck him as the perfect place for meditation. He bought the large tract of land and built a small house and planted some saplings around it. Debendranath Tagore decided to call the place Santiniketan or the 'abode of peace' because of the serenity it brought to his soul. In 1863, he turned it into a spiritual centre where people from all religions, castes and creeds came and participated in meditation.

In the years that followed, Debendranath's son Rabindranath went on to become one of the most formidable literary forces India has ever produced. He wrote in all literary genres but he was first and foremost a poet. As one of the earliest educators to think in terms of the global village, he envisioned an education that was deeply rooted in one's immediate surroundings but connected to the wider world.

Located in the heart of nature, the school aimed to combine education with a sense of obligation towards the larger civic community. Blending the best of western and traditional eastern systems of education, the curriculum revolved organically around nature with classes being held in the open air. Tagore wanted his students to feel free despite being in the formal learning environment of a school, because he himself had dropped out of school when he found himself unable to think and felt claustrophobic within the four walls of a classroom. Nature walks and excursions were a part of the curriculum, special attention was paid to natural phenomena and students were encouraged to follow the life cycles of insects, birds and plants.

The rural paradise of Santiniketan, Tagore's erstwhile home, has become a thriving centre of art, education and internationalism over the years.

Her name was Sulekha, but since her childhood everyone had been calling her Bholi, the simpleton. She was the fourth daughter of Ramlal. When she was ten months old, she had fallen off the cot on her head and perhaps it had damaged some part of her brain. That was why she remained a backward child and came to be known as Bholi, the simpleton. At birth, the child was very fair and pretty. But when she was two years old, she had an attack of small-pox. Only the eyes were saved, but the entire body was permanently disfigured by deep black pockmarks. Little Sulekha could not speak till she was five as she was a slow learner, and when at last she learnt to speak, she stammered. The other children often made fun of her and mimicked her. As a result, she talked very little. Ramlal had seven children-three sons and four daughters, Radha, the eldest, had already been married. The second daughter Mangla's marriage had also been settled, and when that was done, Ramlal would think of the third, Champa. They were good-looking, healthy girls, and it was not difficult to find bridegrooms for them. But Ramlal was worried about Bholi. She had neither good looks nor intelligence. From her very childhood was Bholi neglected at home. She was seven years old when Mangla was married. The same year a primary school for girls was opened in their village. (SSC CGL Tier-II Exam-18-11-2020)

The first time Agha Shahid Ali spoke to me about his approaching death was on 25 April 2001. The conversation began routinely. I had telephoned to remind him that he had been invited to a friend's house for lunch. Although he had been under treatment for cancer for some four months, Shahid was still on his feet and perfectly lucid, thumbing through his engagement book and then suddenly he said: 'Oh dear. I can't see a thing. I heard him pause and then he added: 'I hope this doesn't mean that I'm dying...' I did not know how to respond: his voice was completely at odds with the content of what he had just said, light to the point of jocularity. I mumbled something innocuous: 'No Shahid - of course not. You'll be fine. He cut me short. In a tone of voice that was at once quizzical and direct, he said: 'When it happens I hope you'll write something about me.'

I was shocked into silence and a long moment passed before I could bring myself to say the things that people say on such occasions. 'Shahid you'll be fine. You have to be strong....' From the window of my study I could see a corner of the building in which he lived, some eight blocks away. It was just a few months since he moved there. He had been living a few miles away, in Manhattan, when he had a sudden blackout in February 2000. After tests revealed that he had a malignant brain tumour, he decided to move to Brooklyn, to be close to his youngest sister, Sameetah, who teaches at the Pratt institute-a few blocks away from the street where I live. Shahid ignored my reassurances. He began to laugh and it was then that I realised that he was dead serious. I understood that he was entrusting me with a quite specific charge: he wanted me to remember him not through the spoken recitatives of memory and friendship, but through the written word.

He knew that my instincts would have led me to search for reasons to avoid writing about his death: I would have told myself that I was not a poet; that our friendship was of recent date; that there were many other who knew him much better and would be writing from greater understanding and knowledge. All this Shahid had guessed and he had decided to shut off those routes while there was still time. 'You must write about me.' Finally, I said: 'Shahid, I will: I'll do the best I can.'

The Roman Empire covered a vast stretch of territory that included most of Europe as we know it today and a large part of the Fertile Crescent and North Africa.

The Roman empire embraced a wealth of local cultures and languages; that women had a stronger legal position than they do in many countries today, but also that much of the economy was run on slave labour, denying freedom to substantial numbers of persons. From the fifth century onwards, the empire fell apart in the west but remained intact and exceptionally prosperous in its eastern half.

Roman historians have a rich collection of sources to go on, which we can broadly divide into three groups: (a) texts, (b) documents and (c) material remains. Textual sources include letters, speeches, sermons, laws and histories of the period written by contemporaries.

These were usually called 'Annals' because the narrative was constructed on a year-by-year basis. Documentary sources include mainly inscription and papyrus. Inscriptions were usually cut on stone, so a large number survive, in both Greek and Latin. The 'papyrus' was a reed-like plant that grew along the banks of the Nile in Egypt and was processed to produce sheets of writing material that was very widely used in everyday life. Thousands of contracts, accounts, letters and official documents survive 'on papyrus' and have been published by scholars who are called 'papyrologists'. Material remains include a very wide assortment of items that mainly archeologists discover (for example, through excavation and field survey), for example, buildings, monuments and other kinds of structure, pottery, coins, mosaics, even entire landscapes. Each of these sources can only tell us just so much about the past, and combining them can be a fruitful exercise, but how well this is done depends on the historian's skill!

Meanings of difficult words/phrases

- embraced (V.) : सम्मिलित करना (include or contain)
- run on (Phr. V.) : चलते रहना (to continue for a long time)
- go on (Phr. V.) : आगे बढ़ना (continue or persevere)

- sermons (N.) : धर्मोपदेशक व्याख्यान (a talk on a religious/moral subject)
- contemporaries (N.) : समकालीन (a person living/existing at the same time as another)
- annals (N.) : वार्षिकिक, इतिहास (a record of events year by year; historical records)
- papyrus (N.) : पौजपत्र (a document written on papyrus (paper made by ancient Egyptians))

341. Which of these statements is NOT true?

The drainage systems of India are mainly controlled by the broad relief features of the subcontinent. Accordingly, the Indian rivers are divided into two major groups, the Himalayan rivers and the Peninsular rivers.

Apart from originating from the two major physiographic regions of India, the Himalayan and the peninsular rivers are different from each other in many ways. Most of the Himalayan rivers are perennial. It means that they have water throughout the year. These rivers receive water from rain as well as from melted snow from the lofty mountains. The major Himalayan rivers are the Indus, the Ganga and the Brahmaputra. These rivers are long, and are joined by many large and important tributaries. A river along with its tributaries may be called a river system. The two major Himalayan rivers, the Indus and the Brahmaputra originate from the north of the mountain ranges. They cut through the mountains making gorges in the upper course. The perennial Himalayan rivers have long courses from their source to the sea. They perform intensive erosional activity in their upper courses and carry huge loads of silt and sand with their swift current. In the middle and the lower courses, these rivers form meanders, oxbow lakes, levees and many other depositional features in their flood plains as their speed slackens. They also have well-developed deltas.

A large number of the Peninsular rivers like the Godavari, Kaveri and Krishna are seasonal, as their flow is dependent on rainfall. During the dry season when it doesn't rain, even the large rivers have reduced flow of water in their channels. The Peninsular rivers have shorter and shallower courses as compared to their Himalayan counterparts. However, some of them originate in the central highlands and flow towards the west. Most of the rivers of peninsular India originate in the Western Ghats and flow towards the Bay of Bengal.

Cambridge was my metaphor for England, and it was strange that when I left it had become altogether something else, because I had met Stephen Hawking there. It was on a walking tour through Cambridge that the guide mentioned Stephen Hawking, 'poor man, who is quite disabled now, though he is a worthy successor to Isaac Newton, whose chair he has at the university. And I started, because I had quite forgotten that this most brilliant and completely paralysed astrophysicist, (scholar of astrophysics- branch of physics dealing with stars, planets, etc) the author of A Brief History of Time one of the biggest best-sellers ever, lived here. When the walking tour was done, I rushed to a phone booth and, almost tearing the cord so it could reach me outside, phoned Stephen Hawking's house. There was his assistant on the line and I told him I had come in a wheelchair from India (perhaps he thought I had propelled myself all the way) to write about my travels in Britain. I had to see Professor Hawking - even ten minutes would do. "Half an hour" he said. "From three - thirty to four," And suddenly I felt weak all over. Growing up disabled you get fed up with people asking you to be brave, as if you have a courage account on which you are too lazy to draw a cheque. The only thing that makes you stronger is seeing somebody like you, achieving something huge. Then you know how much is possible and you reach out further than you ever thought you could. "I haven't been brave," said his disembodied computer - voice, the next afternoon.

"I've had no choice." Surely, I wanted to say living creatively with the reality of his disintegrating body was a choice? But I kept quiet, because I felt guilt every time I spoke to him, forcing him to respond. There he was tapping at the little switch in his hand trying to find the words on his computer with the only bit of movement left to him, his long, pale fingers.

Every so often, his eyes would shut in frustrated exhaustion. And sitting opposite him I could feel his anguish. The mind buoyant with thoughts that came out in frozen phrases and sentences still as corpses.

Meanings of difficult words/phrases

metaphor (N.): a thing regarded as representative or symbolic of something else walking tour (N.): a sight-seeing tour made on foot disembodied (Adj.): separated from or existing without the body disintegrating (Adj.): weak and broken frustrated (Adj.): feeling or expressing distress and annoyance resulting from an inability to change or achieve something exhaustion (N.): a state of extreme physical or mental tiredness anguish (N.): severe mental or physical pain or suffering buoyant (Adj.): happy and confident

Many of us have enjoyed visiting a zoo and consider it a day out having fun. Seeing real animals face to face can be thrilling and exciting, but many people wonder whether the animals themselves, while entertaining us, are suffering in the zoos.

Many zoos do not have enough money to provide the animals with the basic features of a proper environment. Most animals are put in an artificial environment (e.g. cages). This isolation from their natural habitat can amount to cruelty. In some zoos, we see concrete floors for burrowing animals like rabbits. Cruelty may be shown in ways other than physical abuse or starvation.

Big predators like lions and tigers are created to chase and hunt. By depriving them of these activities, we forget the reason for which they have evolved. These big cats lie in cages in the zoo eating the food given to them and they have nothing else to do. Highly intelligent and curious animals like chimpanzees and polar bears may become frustrated in a zoo, they need a challenging environment.

Zoo supporters might argue that zoos provide educational opportunities to the visitors, especially children: if we didn't have animals in zoos, children wouldn't see them at all and be ignorant about them. We live at a time when animals in their natural habitat can be seen on TV or computers, even smart phones, while sitting at home. Therefore, the aim should be to conserve animals in the wild, in protected areas called sanctuaries.

361. Which of the following best states the author's purpose in the passage?

- (1) Putting endangered species of animals in zoos is the best way of protecting and saving them.
- (2) We can show our concern for animals better by supporting protected spaces for them in the natural environment.
- (3) One of the main reasons for which big predators have evolved is hunting.
- (4) If animals were not kept in zoos, children would not be able to see and know about them at all.

362. Burrowing animals:

- (1) are intelligent and curious.
- (2) are solitary animals.
- (3) dig the earth for food and shelter.
- (4) chase and hunt other animals.

363. According to the passage, animals in zoos suffer cruelty:

- (1) by being kept in artificial environments.
- (2) by being forced to perform for the visitors.
- (3) by being starved to death.
- (4) by being physically tortured or abused.

364. According to the passage, we visit zoos.....

- (1) to see the animals in cages.
- (2) to spend a day out for fun and excitement.
- (3) to see how animals behave in zoos.
- (4) to watch the frustration of animals in cages.

365. The word predators (in paragraph 3) means:

- (1) animals which are killed for food.
- (2) animals which are starving in zoos.
- (3) animals which kill others for food.
- (4) animals which are kept in their natural habitat.

Religious festivals and ceremonies were held throughout the year, and animal sacrifices and offerings were popular ways to appease and worship gods. Religious life, rituals and practices were unifying aspects of Greece across regions and cities, or city-states, such as Athens and Sparta.

Greek gods were immortal beings who possessed human-like qualities and were represented as completely human in visual art. They were moral and immoral, petty and just, and often vain. The gods were invoked to assist and assist in all matters large, small private and public.

City-states claimed individual gods and goddesses as their patrons. Temples and sanctuaries to the gods were built in every city. Many cities became cult sites due to their connection with a god or goddess and specific myths. For instance, the city of Delphi was known for its oracle and sanctuary of Apollo, because Apollo was believed to have killed a dragon that inhabited Delphi.

The history of the Greek pantheon begins with the primordial deities Gaia (Mother Earth) and Uranus (Father known as Titans. Among these Titans were six males and six females. The males were named Oceanus, Hyperion, Coeus, Crius, Lapetus, and Kronos. The females were named Themis, Mnemosyne, Tethys, Thela, Phoebe, and Rhea.

Kronos eventually overthrew Uranus and ruled during a mythological Golden Age. Over time, he and Rhea had twelve children who would become the Olympian gods. However, Kronos heard a prophecy that his son would overthrow him, as he did to Uranus. In an effort to avert fate, he ordered Rhea to allow him to devour each of the children upon their birth. Best known among the pantheon are the twelve Olympian gods and goddesses who resided on Mt. Olympus in northern Greece. Zeus, the youngest son of Rhea and Kronos, was hidden from his father, instead of being swallowed. Once he became a man, he challenged his father's rule, forcing Kronos to regurgitate the rest of his swallowed children. These children were Zeus's siblings and together they overthrew Kronos, making Zeus the father of gods and men.

It is a truth universally acknowledged that every happy home should have a dog. Ours was a happy family but missed a dog. Our family comprised us four siblings, the parents and the grandfather. Our grandfather, who we called Dadaji, was as awesome person - a strict disciplinarian and a bit whimsical.

One fine morning happiness exploded in our courtyard. Our maid had rescued a puppy from being crushed on the road and she came straight to our house. He was the cutest puppy we had ever seen. He was not a pedigreed one but was intelligent and had playful eyes. His white coat bore dark black tiger stripes. No sooner had he come to our house than he started playing with us as if he had found his old friends. Our maid called him Moti and it was approved by all instantaneously.

But there was a catch. Dadaji never liked dogs. Our happiness was doused with the clearly visualised apprehension that Dadaji would throw away the puppy along with the maid from the house. Sensing the problem our mother devised a cogent argument to convince him of the utility of the puppy. Mother tried to convince Dadaji that the puppy, when he grew up, would protect the house against thieves. Dadaji looked at the puppy in a measured way and derisively commented, "Let's see," and reclined on the easy chair with a newspaper in his hands. It was typical of him - whenever he would concede somebody's argument he would recline on his favourite easy chair with a newspaper.

For three months ours was the happiest family in the world.

But dogs will be dogs. Moti committed a huge mistake. Our Dadaji used wooden sandals with leather straps as footwear.

On that fateful night Moti, nothing else attracting his attention, smelled something leathery and started chewing the leather straps off the sandals. By morning he leather straps were reduced to smithereens.

When Dadaji woke up in the morning and lowered his feet to wear the sandals he was aghast. The sandals were missing.

In the courtyard he saw the shocking scene of the total destruction of his sandals. From disbelief to anger and from anger to rage, within two minutes Dadaji was a fireball. "Where is Moti?" he shouted, heaving heavily. All of us including mom were looking for cover. Moti too realised his mistake and its consequences. He sheepishly sneaked behind the dining table.

A woman who rides the success wave as an underwater photographer or a pilot, financial adviser, management consultant, pearl diver, bartender, bus driver or police officer, is very often suddenly swung back looking for answers after she becomes a mother. And there comes a phase when she has to choose between motherhood and a thriving career. The former takes precedence for many as it becomes the purpose for the latter to exist.

To work or not to work, this Hobson's choice imposes a high cost on both individual and society. As a result, many professionals reject motherhood entirely. Others delay child bearing for so long that they are forced into the arms of the booming fertility industry. Some choose not to work at all, representing a loss to collective investment in talent. But a choice must be made!

Conventionally, a mother is seen putting the others before herself. She knows for slaying her own sphere bit by bit to build a new world for her child. There upon, motherhood and sacrifice get conjoined in a way that both become inseparable.

What merits attention is to understand a woman's struggle of answering the individual within her! Her circumstances post-delivery (over which she hardly has any control) conveniently rob her of the goalpost she fielded half her life, that is her career. Neither money nor family can restore what is lost when she loses her career.

To map the paradigm of this loss gain conundrum, let's examine women in the empowered and non-empowered categories. The first lot have financial, ideological, emotional resources to re-create a career. It is the latter that gets sandwiched between their call for motherhood and aslipping career.

Noticeably, education is the least responsible factor for their deplorable situation. Instead, it is the educated bunch who are more frustrated than their uneducated counterparts; the ones who had carefully worked on a skill and climbed up the success ladder, only to embrace identity crises.

It is important to close the vacuum of a lost career as soon as it appears. At risk is a woman's individuality, her self-esteem that constitutes the very purpose of her being. Else, a long hiatus from work can consume even a well-minded woman and push her into depression.

376. In the context of the passage, 'hit us' means:

- (1) pursuing a career

Ever wondered how efficiently the brain works on waking up in the morning even before the brain works on a chance to ingest the hot cuppa? If I could replace myself with a robot, the latter would need to train through several steps across different levels (kitchen platform, refrigerator and stove), three states (solid, liquid and gas), managing several timed intervals between sub-tasks.

Yet, once done, it will be a spectacle to watch steps executed with such precision and dependability, will be a given.

What's more, it will address multiple tasks in interleaved fashion by harvesting the in-betweens. The time between putting the oil in the wok and dropping the chapati on the tava and flipping the partially roasted rolled: such snippets of time that the human uses up to ponder will be efficiently utilised by a robot.

To a robot, thinking is a challenge! But it will turn its thinking disability to advantage. Time division multiplexing in its finest resolution will be in action. Imagine chopping a pair of beans in between flipping chapatis; or shelving boiled eggs as the oil in the wok gets heated. Who can give up the joy of watching a phoolka puff into a ball on the fire, each puff bringing added cheer. Yet, to a robot it will be a sight lost in vain. For, our busybody will be placing a bottle under the water purifier to fill water when a phoolka puffs, and switching off the button when the next one repeats the feat.

Imagine what will happen when such a robot does come into shape. Mad with joy at gaining one hour of precious morning time, humanity will buy it. Next, the additional hour will be played with. The workaholic will add that hour to work hours. Those committed to physical well-being will hit the gym, and a handful will go jogging.

Yet, soon deeper realisation will set in. Sleeping off the extra hour will seem a logical stable state and will be welcomed by all. Until, even sleeping gets boring. In due course of time, the fate of my robot will be no different from that of the many fancies mankind has evolved through. The "going back to roots" movement will find a new entrant. Like the shift from refined to whole, from polished to brown, from cooked to raw, we will retrace our steps. The robot discarded into the e-waste bin, we would make our entry back into the kitchen. Many of the once-familiar sights and smells would then drift back into our senses slowly.

381. 'harvesting the in-betweens' refers to:

- (1) The interval between many cups of tea in the course of the day.
- (2) eating in between chores in the kitchen.
- (3) utilising the in-between time while multi-tasking.
- (4) messing up the kitchen while working there.

382. According to the writer of this passage, which of the statements is NOT true about robots?
- (1) A robot uses in-between times efficiently.
 - (2) We will sooner or later get bored with robots.
 - (3) Robots will replace human beings.
 - (4) A robot does the work mechanically without any emotions.

383. With regard to robots, what would 'going back to the roots' mean?

- (1) Robots and humans working together
- (2) Evolution of the robots
- (3) Making the robots work like a human
- (4) To start doing the kitchen work oneself

384. In what context does the writer mention: doing extrawork, hitting the gym and jogging?

- (1) General activities of all adults.
- (2) Activities people do to keep themselves busy.
- (3) Activities people will indulge in when robots do kitchen work.
- (4) Activities disliked by lazy people.

385. 'It will be a spectacle to watch.' What would be a spectacle to watch?

- (1) Making tea/coffee while half asleep.
- (2) The robot drinking a cup of tea.
- (3) A robot making a morning drink.
- (4) The narrator making a perfect cup of tea.

The term 'dietary fibres' refers collectively to indigestible carbohydrates present in plant foods. The importance of these dietary fibres came into the picture when it was observed that the people taking a diet rich in these fibres had low incidence of coronary heart disease, irritable bowel syndrome, dental caries and gall stones.

The foodstuffs rich in these dietary fibres are cereals and grains, legumes, fruits with seeds, citrus fruits, carrots, cabbage, green leafy vegetables, apples, melons, peaches, pears etc. These dietary fibres are not digested by the enzymes of the stomach and the small intestine. They have the property of holding water and because of it, these get swollen and behave like a sponge as these pass through the gastrointestinal tract. The fibres add bulk to the diet and increase transit time in the gut and decrease the time of release of ingested food in the colon. These fibres hold water so the stools are soft, bulky and readily eliminated.

In recent years, it has been considered essential to have some amount of fibres in the diet. Their beneficial effects lie in preventing heart disease and decreasing cholesterol level. The fibres like gum and pectin are reported to decrease post prandial (after meals) glucose level in blood. They are also recommended for the management of certain types of diabetes.

The fibres increase motility of the small intestine and the colon and so there is less time for exposure of the mucosa to harmful toxic substances. Therefore, there is a less desire to eat and the energy intake can be maintained within the range of requirement. This phenomenon helps in keeping a check on obesity.

The dietary fibres may have some adverse effects on nutrition by binding some trace metals like calcium, magnesium, phosphorus, zinc and others and therefore preventing their proper absorption. This may pose a possibility of nutritional deficiency especially when diets contain marginal levels of mineral elements. This may put constraints on increasing dietary fibres. It is suggested that an intake of 40 gram dietary fibres per day is desirable.

386. Which of the following statements is NOT true?

- (1) Dietary fibres help in preventing heart disease.
- (2) Dietary fibres help in relieving constipation.

My grandmother and I were good friends. My parents left me with her when they went to live in the city and we were constantly together. She used to wake me up in the morning and get me ready for school. She said her morning prayer in a monotonous sing-song while she bathed and dressed me in the hope that I would listen and get to know it by heart. I listened because I loved her voice but never bothered to learn it. Then she would fetch my wooden slate which she had already washed and plastered with yellow chalk, a tiny earthen ink-pot and a red pen, tie them all in a bundle and hand it to me. After a breakfast of a thick, stale chapati with a little butter and sugar spread on it, we went to school. She carried several stale chapatis with her for the village dogs.

My grandmother always went to school with me because the school was attached to the temple. The priest taught us the alphabet and the morning prayer. While the children sat in rows on either side of the verandah singing the alphabet or the prayer in a chorus, my grandmother sat inside reading the scriptures. When we had both finished, we would walk back together. This time the village dogs would meet us at the temple door. The methods of embalming, or treating the dead body, that the ancient Egyptians used is called 'mummification'. Using special processes, the Egyptians removed all moisture from the body, leaving only a dried form that would not easily decay. It was important in their religion to preserve the dead body in as life-like a manner as possible.

to pull out bits of brain tissue. The embalmers then removed the organs of the abdomen and chest through a cut usually made on the left side of the abdomen. They left the heart in place, believing it to be the center of a person's being and intelligence. The other organs were preserved separately, with the stomach, liver, lungs and intestines placed in special boxes or jars, today called canopic jars. These were buried with the mummy.

Next the wrapping began. Each mummy needed hundreds of yards of linen. The priests carefully wound the long strips of linen around the body, sometimes even wrapping each finger and toe separately before wrapping the entire hand or foot. In order to protect the body from mishap in after life, amulets were placed among the wrappings and prayers and magical words written on some of the linen strips. Often the priests placed a mask of the person's face between the layers of head bandages. At last the priests wrapped the final cloth or shroud in place and secured it with linen strips. The mummy was complete. It was then placed in the tomb along with food, furniture, vessels, perfumes, jewels and other things required for afterlife.

Vasco Da Gama was the first European to find an oceanic trading route to India. He accomplished what many centuries before him could not do. His discovery of this route helped the Portuguese establish a long-lasting maritime empire in Asia and Africa. The new ocean route allowed Portuguese sailors to avoid the Arab empire that held in the Mediterranean and Middle East. Vasco da Gama opened a new world of riches by opening up an oceanic route. His voyage and explorations helped change the world for Europeans. Vasco da Gama's maritime voyage was during the period when Portugal was searching for a trade route around Africa to India. The Ottoman Empire controlled almost all European trade routes to Asia. They could, and did, charge high prices for ships passing through ports. When Manuel I became King of Portugal in 1495, he continued efforts to open a trade route around Africa. When Tao Ying rides on the bus alone, quite often she does not bother to buy a ticket. Why should she? Without her, the bus would still be stopping at every stop, a driver and a conductor would still have to be employed, and the same amount of petrol used. Clearly Tao Ying has to be astute. When the bus conductor looked like the responsible type, she would buy a ticket as soon as she got on board. But if he appeared to be casual and careless, she would not dream of paying, considering it a small punishment for him and a little saving for herself.

Today she is with her son Xiao Ye. She follows him onto the bus. As the doors shut her jacket is caught, ballooning up like a tent behind her. She twists this way and that, finally wrenching herself free. 'Mama, tickets!' Xiao Ye says. Children are often more conscious of rituals than adults. Without a ticket in his hand, the ride doesn't count as a proper ride. On the peeling paint of the door somebody has painted the shape of a pale finger. It points at a number: 1.10 m. Between Xiao Ye's round head and the tip of the painted digit setting out the height requirement for a ticket rests the beautiful slender fingers of Tao Ying. Xiao Ye, you are not quite tall enough, still one centimetre away,' she tells him softly.

'Mama! I'm tall enough, I'm tall enough!' Xiao Ye shouts at the top of his voice, stamping on the floor as if it were a tin drum. 'You told me the last time I could have a ticket this next time, this is the next time. You don't keep your word!' He looks up at his mother angrily. Tao Ying looks down at her son. A ticket costs twenty cents. Twenty cents is not to be scoffed at. It can buy a cucumber, two tomatoes or, at a reduced price, three bunches of radishes or enough spinach to last four days. But Xiao Ye's face is raised up like a half-open blossom, waiting to receive his promise from the sun. She says, 'Two tickets, please.' The fierce conductor has beady eyes. This child is one centimetre short of requiring a ticket.

Xiao Ye shrinks, not just one but several centimetres—the need for a ticket has all of a sudden become interwoven with the pride of a small child. To be able to purchase self-esteem with twenty cents is something that can only happen in childhood and certainly no mother can resist an opportunity to make her son happy. 'I would like to buy two tickets,' she says politely.

A piano teacher described an interesting encounter she had had with a young lady who came to inquire about music lessons. The young lady asked her, "How long will this course take? My father tells me that it is in fashion now to be able to play musical instruments and that I should learn one quickly. I want something that will be quick, fast and easy like like..." When the amused teacher explained that it would take a lifetime of meticulous practice to learn music, her face fell and, needless to say, she never came back.

The single most important factor that distinguishes those of us who succeed in any venture and those of us who don't is this 'instant coffee' attitude. Most of us want results quickly. We want to reach the top immediately and get worked up when things go wrong. Perseverance and patience are forgotten words. We get upset, frustrated, and angry when a skill or activity requires us to put in a lot of effort and time. We get dejected and want to give it up. But such thinking serves no good. For, it doesn't solve the problem. Life is tough for those with an 'instant coffee' attitude.

Success, real success and happiness come to those who have a 'bread-making' attitude those who are willing to knead the dough, wait for hours for it to rise, only to punch it down and knead some more, wait for another couple of hours for it to rise again, and then bake it before it is ready to be eaten. Nothing is instantaneous. For every endeavour - whether in the area of career, academics, music, sports, relationships, physical fitness or even in spirituality - it is a long, arduous journey.

Only if we are willing to put in the time, painstaking effort and have faith, can we get results. If we don't accept this difficult but true fact of life, our lives will be far from being happy and fulfilling. For we may not make that extra effort which can change the course of life dramatically, for the good. The major problems with these 'instant coffee' solutions are that they are invariably shortlived. If we stubbornly refuse to give up this search for quick solutions all we do is end up on the wrong track.

You go up a dark, rickety stairwell of a building on a crowded street in Calcutta. You enter a small room. The centre of the room is empty but the corners are stacked with bedrolls, utensils and water bottles. Musical instruments, drums, cymbals and gongs are piled in a corner. Today, the room is filled with the laughter of men and women in colourful attire. Among the happy chorus of congratulations and laughter, the bride Chumki Pal and the groom Sandeep can be seen smiling. They are both blind, as are most of the people surrounding them. Pal is wearing a bright turquoise blue sari. "I know it's blue because people have told me but I can't imagine how it looks. But believe me, when I dream, I dream only in colours," she says. Their romance blossomed when they met as members of Blind Opera, the only one of its kind in the country as well as in Asia.

The 36 spirited members of Blind Opera demonstrate that physical disability is not an obstacle. They enact plays by Rabindranath Tagore, considered challenging even by veteran theatre groups. Blind Opera was launched in 1996 by four theatre aficionados, who took it as a challenge to get together the talents of these visually impaired people. The challenge to present the cast on stage is immense since space management is a problem. To solve this, the directors use ropes to separate the stage and the wings. When the members step on the rope they know that it is the entrance to the stage. The members cannot see, but they can smell, feel and touch - three elements inherent to any theatre. At Blind Opera, they 'believe' that the blind can see. That is, they are in their own way, if not in our way, with the help of these abilities.

For the visually impaired, theatre is the medium for expression of their creative urges. They respond instinctively; they cannot copy anyone else because they cannot see. Their own language tells the story and hence it is very spontaneous. The members have earned kudos from Calcutta audiences. For the members of the troupe, discovering the language of the body is in a way also a journey of the persona. Coming from diverse backgrounds but bound together by the same ability, they have found an outlet for their creativity through the plays.

They do not feel isolated anymore because they can relate to their fellow performers. There is also a greater purpose behind it: to use theatre to build a community and to stream the huge number of disabled living in isolation. Together they can be a force to demand better facilities in their life. Blind children should enter the mainstream from the beginning. The big dream of the group is to establish a drama school following the ideal of Tagore's Shantiniketan, offering a platform for creative expression to all those who are economically and socially forced to stay in the periphery. Chumki Pal, they all dream in colour.

In the stress-ridden world, traditional pastimes that could prove therapeutic are dying for want of patronage. One such is the art of puppetry. The word 'puppet' is derived from the Latin word pupa, meaning 'doll' or 'girl'. Puppets came into being in India in the third century A.D. Here it was honed into a theatrical art. It helped to propagate the works of saints and religious leaders, and also depict stories from epics. Later, it spread to South East Asia. The Cambodian puppeteers inspired the Thais. Java and Bali followed though it didn't catch on in Sumatra. The Malays followed the Siamese and Japanese styles in the nineteenth century. Gradually, puppets became more sophisticated in appearance, as skilled craftsmen began to make the models. Puppeteers became trained as performers. In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, puppet theatres became extremely popular in artistic circles. Writers like George Sands and Goethe organised their own well-prepared puppet shows to entertain their friends. Puppet shows have been mentioned in the literature by Shakespeare, Ben Johnson, and many others.

Basically, there are three kinds of puppets. Shadow puppets are made of translucent leather and coloured vegetable dyes. Buffalo, goat, or sheep skin is treated to become translucent. Limbs are loosely jointed so that they can be made to move separately. A stick is attached vertically in the middle. Movement of the stick causes general movements. But for special movements, single strings attached to the limbs are used. These leather puppets are projected on a screen, which is illuminated by a light source placed behind the puppets. The puppeteer manipulates the puppets to form moving shadows on the screen. He also speaks the parts, sings, or is accompanied by music.

String puppets involve puppets that are manipulated by six strings. The performance is on a stage but the puppeteers are never seen. They wear anklets which produce the illusion that the puppets themselves are dancing. The main storyteller recites the storyline, while the puppets perform, and the dialogue and music are provided by the puppeteers. Rod or stick puppets are constructed around the main central rod. A short horizontal bar serves as the shoulders, from which the upper limbs dangle. The arms, made of cloth and stuffed with straw or paper, are jointed or manipulated with other thinner rods. These puppets can be the size of a human being. The puppeteer hides behind the puppet and manipulates it. The coordination of the limbs comes only through practice. Puppetry is a good communication medium. Messages can be propagated in a realistic way. Puppet making and performing is good occupational therapy for convalescents and physically disabled people. Muscular coordination and manual dexterity improve with effort. However, the best use of this art is that it can provide delightful hours of fun to young and old alike.

Although pollution of land, sea, and air has been well documented, the latest and the least recognised version is the swelling tide of noise which is engulfing urban as well as rural areas. This has long-term implications on the ecology, health and productivity of a fast developing country like India.

Unlike other pollutants, noise lacks visibility, seldom to be dismissed at will and therefore less likely to be perceived as a threat. Available data indicates that noise does pose a threat to health and is known to have caused a number of complications. Declining productivity among workers in certain industries has been directly correlated with noise levels, particularly those under constant exposure to the menace.

The first-ever survey of the impact of noise on health, conducted by All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS), has established that noise not only impairs the physical and psychological functioning of the human organism but also causes nausea, vomiting, pain, hypertension and a lot of other complications, including cardio-vascular complaints. A study by Post Graduate School of Basic Medical Sciences, Chennai, confirms such conclusions. In 50 per cent of industries, it was found that workmen exposed to higher intensities of noise in occupational capacities were often irritated, short-tempered and impatient and more likely to resort to agitation and disruption of production. This was true of units in heavy industrial pockets in and around the four metropolitan centres.

Recreational noise, another ugly facet, is becoming more widespread in cities and towns. Loudspeakers are turned at full volume during marriages, festivals, jaggans, musical programmes, particularly at night, without the least consideration for others. Even at 50 dB, sound can awaken a person from a deep slumber. As experiments have shown, loudspeakers with output from 60 to 80 dB cause the pupils of a slumbering person to dilate, with increasing intake of oxygen, resulting in palpitation. The effect is more pronounced in narrow lanes. TV sets are played at full volume at prime time, invariably disturbing neighbours. Noise making seems to have become the latest status symbol, be it an election campaign or slogan shouting or advertising ownership of a TV set.

(SSC CGL Tier II (CBE) Exam, 29.01.2022)

436. In what way does noise become a status symbol?

- (1) Exposing workmen to high intensity sounds
- (2) Showing off the loud volume of one's TV
- (3) Awakening people from deep sleep
- (4) Conducting late night musical shows

According to a survey conducted by AIIMS, noise does NOT cause:

- (1) heart related complaints
- (2) eye infections
- (3) hypertension
- (4) nausea and vomiting

Noise can be differentiated from other pollutants because:

- (1) it does not impact the productivity of the workers in industries
- (2) it is regarded as a small irritant which may be easily dismissed
- (3) it is not detrimental to our health in any way
- (4) it is prevalent only in the urban areas of the country

Recreational noise is created during:

- (1) discord between agitated workers
- (2) running of heavy machinery
- (3) weddings and festivals
- (4) shouting of slogans

Which of the following statements is FALSE?

- (1) Loudspeakers with low decibel sound can cause palpitations.
- (2) Several studies have been conducted on air, water and land pollution.
- (3) There is a direct correlation between productivity of workers and noise.
- (4) Noise pollution is not visible to the eyes.

In the late 18th century the Industrial Revolution began to transform life in Britain. Until then, most people lived in the countryside and made their living from farming. By the late 18th century most people in Britain lived in towns and made their living from mining or manufacturing industries. In 1712 a man named Thomas Newcomen (1663-1729) made primitive steam engines for pumping water from mines. In 1769 James Watt (1736-1819) patented a more efficient steam engine. In 1785 his engine was adapted to drive machinery in a cotton factory. The use of steam engines to drive machines slowly transformed industry.

Meanwhile, during the 1700s Britain built up a great overseas empire. The North American colonies were lost after the War of Independence 1776-1783. On the other hand, after the Seven Years War 1756-1763, Britain captured Canada and India. Britain also took colonies like Grenada, St. Vincent and Tobago in the West Indies. In 1707 the Act of Union was passed. Scotland was united with England and Wales. England became part of Great Britain.

Owning land was the main form of wealth in the 18th century. Political power and influence were in the hands of the landowners. At the top were the nobility. Below them were a class of nearly rich landowners called the gentry. In the early 18th century there was another class of landowners called yeomen who were small landowners, described as farmers of the middle class. However, during the century the middle class became less and less numerous. However other middle class people such as merchants and professional men became richer and more numerous, especially in the towns.

Below them were the great mass of the population, craftsmen and labourers. In the 18th century probably half the population lived at subsistence or bare survival level.

In the early 18th century England suffered from gin drinking. It was cheap and it was sold everywhere as you did not need a license to sell it. Many people ruined their health by drinking gin. Sadly, for many poor people drinking gin was their only comfort. The situation improved after 1751 when a tax was imposed on gin.

At the end of the 17th century it was estimated the population of England and Wales was about $5 \frac{1}{2}$ million.

The population of Scotland was about 1 million. The population of London was about 600,000. In the mid-18th century the population of Britain was about $6 \frac{1}{2}$ million. In the late 18th century it grew rapidly and by 1801 it was over 9 million. The population of London was almost 1 million.

During the 18th century, towns in Britain grew larger. Nevertheless, most towns still had populations of less than 10,000. However, in the late 18th century new industrial towns in the Midland and the North of England mushroomed. Meanwhile, the population of London grew to nearly 1 million by the end of the century. Other towns were much smaller. The population of Liverpool was about 77,000 in 1800. Birmingham had about 73,000 people and Manchester had about 70,000. Bristol had a population of about 68,000. Sheffield was smaller with 31,000 people and Leeds had about 30,000 people.

The severe cyclonic storm, Nisarga, which made a landfall south of Alibag in Maharashtra's Raigad district on Wednesday at 11.30 a.m. is an indication of an increasing frequency of severe cyclones developing in the Arabian Sea in the past decade, a trend that studies have linked to climate change.

In the past two years, there have been seven cyclones in the Arabian Sea, though, according to India Meteorological Department (IMD), the ratio of cyclones in the Arabian Sea and the Bay of Bengal -- which just witnessed the destructive cyclone Amphan on May 21 -- is 1:4. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) last year came out with a special report, Ocean and Cryosphere in a Changing Climate, in which it said that extreme rainfall and extreme sea level events associated with some tropical cyclones are being seen to have a cascading impact on coastal areas.

"There is cascading impact for an increase in annual global proportion of Category 4 or 5 tropical cyclones in recent decades," the IPCC report had said.

A category 4 cyclone has a wind speed of 209-251 kmph, and is referred to as an extremely severe cyclonic storm, while a category 5 cyclone has a wind speed of more than 252 kmph and is referred to as a super cyclone.

The IPCC report refers to a 2017 study led by Atmospheric and Oceanic Sciences Program, Princeton University, USA, which found that in 2014 and 2015, post-monsoon extremely severe cyclonic storms (ESCS) were first observed over the Arabian Sea causing widespread damage.

The study had concluded that climate change had led to an increase in the occurrence of ESCS in the Arabian Sea.

"Our research suggests that cyclones would be more frequent during the post monsoon season (October-December) by a series climate model simulations. However, we didn't find any significant changes in cyclone activity during the pre-monsoon (April-June) season through the climate simulations. It is very difficult to identify if a cyclone (like Nisarga) is generated in line with climate change," said Hiroyuki Murakami, the lead author of the study. "Coastal hazards will be exacerbated by an increase in the intensity, magnitude of storm surge, rising mean sea levels and precipitation rates of tropical cyclones," the IPCC report further stated.

The blowout of an Oil India Limited (OIL) gas well in Assam's Tinsukia district last week is causing extensive damage to biodiversity and wildlife in the region, including endangered hoolock gibbons and Gangetic dolphins.

In Baghjan, where the gas well blowout occurred on 27 August, is close to the Dibru-Saikhowa National Park, the Motapung wetlands, and the forest villages of Baghjan which are habitat to the hoolock gibbon. The uncontrollable gas flow is continuing from the gas well.

"What we are seeing is complete horror. Condensed oil is coating leaves and biodiversity area is very badly affected. A thick layer of crude oil on the water. Fish are dying and some cattle that graze in the adjacent wetlands are also dead," said Mridupaban Phukon, a student and wildlife activist.

"We have been informed by people in Barekuri villages that condensed oil is coating leaves and has started affecting the hoolock gibbon habitat. If not contained immediately the wetlands and national park will be devastated," he said.

Around 650 families have been evacuated from the affected areas and continue to be camped in three relief camps.

"I visited the area on Sunday but it was barricaded. I could see the damage everywhere. Dead fish were floating in the vegetation is brown now. One Gangetic dolphin was seen after the leak. Usually the Maguri Jheel is rich in biodiversity, I could hardly spot any birds that day. I appeal for immediate help," said Nabamita Ray, a doctor and wildlife activist.

Oil India's crisis management team (CMT) members started pumping water through the casing valve. Water being pumped continuously through the valve into the well head. Oil India has also contacted global experts to control the blowout. The water pumps are being installed in nearby river (source of water) and pipeline-laying work in progress.

A blowout is the uncontrolled release of crude oil or natural gas from an oil well or gas well after pressure control systems have failed.

Dibru-Saikhowa has recorded over 40 mammals, 500 species of birds, 104 fish species, 105 butterfly species and 680 types of plants. It harbours tigers, elephants, wild dogs, leopards, hoolock gibbons, capped langurs, slow lorises, Gangetic dolphins, besides critically endangered species such as the Bengal florican, white-winged duck, greater adjutant stork, white-rumped vulture, slender-billed vulture, and the very rare and endemic black-breasted woodpecker. All these are facing threat from the uncontrolled flow of the oil.

colours, but merely separated colours that were already there," the university's researcher, Alisha Matthewson-Grand, wrote.

"Indeed, Newton was so intellectually transformed by his period of isolation that later commentators have referred to his time away from Cambridge as his annus mirabilis, or his year of wonders."

Charles Darwin (Christ's College) Darwin's experience with isolation was not the result of a pandemic but his own chronic ill health. He suffered from a myriad of unexplained symptoms including vertigo, vomiting, cramps, fatigue, anxiety and visual disturbances. He noted in his autobiography of 1876 that "few persons can have lived a more retired life than we [Darwin and his wife Emma] have done. Besides short visits to the houses of relations, and occasionally to the seaside or elsewhere, we have gone nowhere."

Darwin believed that periods of isolation and ill health helped his career. At home, he was free from the demands placed on other scientists (teaching, administrative work), and thus able to devote himself entirely to research, he wrote. "Ill health, though it has annihilated several years of my life, has saved me from the distractions of society and amusement."

Lord Byron (Trinity College). In 1811, Lord Byron was forced to quarantine in Malta after returning from a cholera-ravaged Greece. He was furious at the prospect of spending 40 days in lockdown, a measure he considered to be draconian and unnecessary.

While confined, he wrote 'Farewell to Malta', a satirical poem attacking the island for (among other things) "its smoky towns and cloudy sky" and its "cursed street of stairs". He references his quarantine explicitly in the first verse "Adieu, thou damnedst quarantine / That gave me fever, and the spleen".

John Milton (Christ's College). The author of 'Paradise Lost' spent some time away from Cambridge as a first year undergraduate in 1626, when the town was hit by bubonic plague. He was home in London when he wrote 'Elegia Prima', his first Latin elegy. The work is a nearly example of his aptitude for verse composition, as well as his impressive flair for comedy.

A new and extreme tourist attraction has just exploded on to the scene in Iceland: Volcano Walking. It would appear, according to Trip Advisor, that this is one trip that cannot be missed, despite the extortionate cost.

The idea of making Thrihnukagigur volcano accessible was the brainchild of Ami B. Stefansson, a doctor in Reykjavik and a lifelong cave enthusiast. He has been studying caves in Iceland since 1954 and some would argue that there is no-one who has more experience. Thrihnukagigur has always been special to Stefansson ever since he was the first to descend down to the crater base in 1974. Like most people who experience it, he was utterly spell-bound by its uniqueness and beauty and made it his mission to protect and preserve this stunning natural phenomenon. Unlike others who may have only seen the profit that could be made from walking into the mouth of a

COMPREHENSION TEST

Stefansson believed that the primary focus was to protect such a grand natural wonder with the utmost respect. The first 'volcano tourists' entered the volcano in 2005 and it has since been labelled as one of the most unique tourist attractions in the world.

Volcano walkers are taken to the mouth of the crater where they are lowered in a basket into the depths of the earth. People once thought that volcanoes were portals to hell and associated with death and destruction and yet the entrance to the crater is awe-inspiring and almost beautiful. The vastness of it can feel overwhelming. It is the entrance of a cathedral and the Statue of Liberty could easily fit down the shaft. After 6 minutes and 120 metres, visitors emerge at the crater base. The ground space is the size of three full-sized basketball courts placed next to each other.

At the bottom there is a reverent hush. People whisper respect to the sleeping giant who has lain dormant for 1000 years. The subterranean walls are scorched with colours from a divine palette: magenta red, vibrant purple, orange, vivid green and honey yellow. The colour varieties in certain places where 4000 years ago the magma was pushed out with brutal force. This is Mother Nature's secret place, her private art studio where visitors are like trespassers. The protruding rock faces show a variety of patterns and formations that have been molded by heat, pressure and time. Floodlights illuminate the walls and draw attention to the beauty humans were never intended to see. A light rain weeps from the porous rock and covers the crater sides with a shine that makes the scorch marks can be seen close up - at one point in time these rock faces were glowing red with fiery lava. This giant, although sleeping, is still dangerous; an entire drop into the void is disguised by a collection of rocks close to where visitors stand.

It is a soul-enriching experience and visitors often report feeling deeply moved by the beauty and tranquillity of something that was once so destructive and angry. Confronted with this result of the unrestrained forces of nature, it is hard not to feel small and powerless in comparison. Sadly, the magical spell is broken when the basket appears, indicating that it is time for visitors to return to reality. On the return hike, visitors walk across the lava fields as though they are astronauts on the moon. They pass enormous open wounds where the landscape is literally tearing itself apart as tectonic plates slowly shift. It serves as a final reminder that this giant is merely dormant, not dead.

At the end of 2020, there were 82.4 million forcibly displaced people in the world, of which more than a quarter are refugees.

"By the end of 2020, the number of people forcibly displaced due to persecution, conflict, violence, human rights violations, and events seriously disturbing public order, had grown to 82.4 million, the highest number on record according to available data," according to the UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). Out of these 82.4 million forcibly displaced people in the world, more than a quarter are refugees.

Just five countries produce 65% of all refugees displaced abroad: the Syrian Arab Republic, Venezuela, Afghanistan, South Sudan, and Myanmar.

The top five host countries, where these displaced people are currently located are: Turkey, Colombia, Germany, Pakistan, and Uganda.

With 3.7 million displaced people now within its borders, Turkey hosts twice as many refugees as Colombia, the next highest host country, with 1.7 million people. The situation in Turkey illustrates the effects of proximity, as 92% of its refugees have come from neighbouring Syria, where war and armed conflict have now been raging for more than 10 years. It demonstrates that huge numbers of displaced people stay close to their point of origin.

There are more than 48 million internally displaced people – people who have had to flee their homes in search of safety elsewhere within their home nation.

The highest increases in the number of internally displaced people happened in Africa and were provoked by a combination of armed conflict and humanitarian disasters. Civil war in Ethiopia, Africa's second most-populated country, has sparked a wave of displacement in a region that was already facing what the UNHCR calls "a full-scale humanitarian crisis."

All in all, more than a million Ethiopian people had to leave their homes behind last year, the UNHCR says.

Directions (486 - 495) : Read the passage and answer the questions given after it.

The savanna landscape is typified by tall grass and short trees. It is rather misleading to call the savanna 'tropical grassland', because trees are always present with the luxuriant tall grass. The terms 'parkland' or 'bush-veld' perhaps describe the landscape better.

Trees grow best towards the equatorial humid latitudes or along river banks but decrease in height and density away from the equator. They occur in clumps or as scattered individuals. The trees are deciduous, shedding their leaves in the cool, dry season to prevent excessive loss of water through transpiration, e.g. acacias. Others have broad trunks, with water-storing devices to survive through the prolonged drought such as baobabs and figs. Trees are mostly hard, gnarled and thorny and exude gum like gum arabic. Many trees are umbrella-shaped, exposing only a narrow edge to the strong winds.

Palms which cannot withstand the drought are confined to the wettest areas or along rivers. Vegetation luxuriance reaches its peak in the rainy season. In true savanna grass is tall and coarse, growing 6 to 12 feet high. The elephant grass may attain a height of even 15 feet. The grass tends to grow in compact tufts and has long roots which reach down in search of water. It appears greenish and well-nourished in the rainy season but turns yellow and dies down in the dry season that follows. The grass turns dormant throughout the long, rainless period and springs up again in the next rainy season.

In between the tall grass are scattered short trees and low bushes. As the rainfall diminishes towards the deserts the savanna merges into thorny scrub. In Australia, this scrubland is particularly well represented by a number of species: mallee, mulga, spinifex grass and other bushes.

The savanna, particularly in Africa, is the home of thousands of animals that are trapped or killed each year by tracked down for their skins, horns, tusks, bones or hair. Others are captured alive and sent out of Africa as zoological specimens or pets. There is such a wealth of animal life in Africa that many of the animals that we see at the cinema are actually taken in the savanna. There are, in fact, two main groups of animals in the savanna, the grass-eating herbivorous animals and the flesh-eating carnivorous animals. The herbivorous animals are often very alert and move swiftly from place to place in search of green pastures.

They are endowed with great speed to run away from the savage flesh-eaters that are always after them. The fast and grass-eating animals include the zebra, antelope, giraffe, deer, gazelle, elephant and okapi.

Many are well camouflaged species and their presence amongst the tall greenish-brown grass cannot be easily detected. The giraffe with such a long neck can locate its enemies a great distance away, while the elephant is so huge and strong that few animals will venture to come near it. It is well equipped with tusks and trunk for defence.

The carnivorous animals like the lion, tiger, leopard, hyena, panther, jaguar, jackal, lynx and puma have powerful jaws and teeth for attacking other animals. Their natural colorings of light yellowish-brown, often with stripes like the tiger or spots like the leopard, match perfectly with the tawny background of the savanna. They often hide themselves in shady spots up in the branches or amongst the tall bushes, and many wild animals, as well as hunters themselves, are caught unawares in this manner.

New Delhi - India is set to surpass China as the world's most populous country in 2023, with each counting more than 1.4 billion residents this year, a United Nations report said on Monday, warning that high fertility would challenge economic growth.

The world's population, estimated to reach 8 billion by November 15 this year, could grow to 8.5 billion in 2030, and 10.4 billion in 2100, as the pace of mortality slows, said the report released on World Population Day.

India's population was 1.21 billion in 2011, according to the domestic census, which is conducted once a decade. The government had deferred the 2021 census due to the Covid-19 pandemic.

The world's population was growing at its slowest since 1950, having fallen below 1% in 2020, UN estimates showed.

In 2021, the average fertility of the world's population stood at 2.3 births per woman over a lifetime, having fallen from about 5 births in 1950. Global fertility is projected to decline further to 2.1 births per woman by 2050.

Referring to an earlier World Health Organization report – estimating about 14.9 million deaths relating to the Covid-19 pandemic between January 2020 and December 2021, the UN report said global life expectancy at birth fell to 71 years in 2021 from 72.8 years in 2019, mostly due to the pandemic.

The United Nations said more than half of the projected increase in the global population up to 2050 will be concentrated in eight countries – Democratic Republic of Congo, Egypt, Ethiopia, India, Nigeria, Pakistan, the Philippines and Tanzania.

Countries of sub-Saharan Africa are expected to contribute more than half of the increase anticipated through 2050.

However, the population of 61 countries is projected to decrease by 1% or more between 2022 and 2050, driven by a fall in fertility.

On a cold wintry Christmas day in 1998, the ice and snow was beating down upon the windows of the vehicles as we travelled to an obscure orphanage in Bosnia-Herzegovina. We battled unstable hills blanketed with two feet of snow. The narrow road forced us to drive perilously close to the edge. This would be my first Christmas away from home and family. I could imagine my wife and my two little daughters opening their gifts on Christmas day. Today, I was going to learn for the first time how it would be to spend Christmas day with other children.

Enemy activity had devastated the villages. I had heard stories and seen pictures of this particular village where we were headed. What I did not know was that it would be a camp full of destitute families and children. As we entered the village, the children lined the roads on both sides and cheered. They ran to us in excitement as we climbed out of our vehicles. Within moments I saw my soldiers passing out sweets and chocolates and taking with the children. The adults who were not sure if we could be trusted kept their distance. But soon, they too were won over by my mean. The soldiers unloaded 87 boxes of toys, clothes, shoes, school supplies and candy. We were soon surrounded by the people of the village who shook our hands and smiled shyly in thanks for our gifts and our presence.

After the two hour visit, as we rose to leave, the camp leader said to us, "Please come again, even if you have nothing to give. We enjoyed having you here." We had loved every moment we had been there. This year we had truly learnt the Christmas spirit of loving and giving!

Directions (506-510): Read the following passage and answer the questions.

For birds to survive, they must learn to live with and off humans, and those birds, like crows, sparrows and mynahs, who do this to perfection, continue to thrive as our cities grow; whereas the purely wild birds who depend on forests for life, are rapidly disappearing because forests are disappearing. If you have just a bit of garden and perhaps a guava tree, you will be visited by innumerable bulbuls, mynahs, tailor birds, parrots etc. Or, if you own an old house, you will have to share it with pigeons and sparrows. And, if you have neither garden nor rooftop, you will still be visited by the crows.

Where man goes, the crow follows. He has learnt to be the first bird of the moon, scavenging among the paper bags and cartons left behind by untidy astronauts. Crows favour the densest areas of human population and there must be one for every human. Many crows seem to have been humans in their previous lives; they possess all the cunning and sense of self preservation of man. At the same time, there are many humans who have obviously been crows. We haven't lost their thieving instincts.

Watch a crow cling along the garden wall with an eye at the kitchen door and any attendant humans. He waits in the background till his chance comes and then he pounces. I have even known a crow to make off with an egg from the breakfast table. The mynah, however is more of a gentleman. He prefers fruit on the tree to scraps from the kitchen. He visits the garden in expectation of hand-outs. He is quite handsome too, with his bright orange bill. Although the blue jay is quite capable of making his living in the forest, he seems to show a preference for human haunts. He would rather perch on a telegraph wire because he finds it a better launching pad for his sudden rocket flights and aerial acrobatics?

This year, I celebrated twenty-five years with a Seeing Eye dog. When I came to 'The Seeing Eye' in 1983, I had no idea how much my canine partner would do for me. I well, remember walking down a country road independently, with a light step and joy in my heart, knowing that my first Seeing Eye dog would keep me safe.

Since that glorious beginning, my dogs have seen me through two university degrees while living in four different countries in Canada and the United States. These competent and having guides have shown me amazing skills-keeping me safe from traffic, fallen trees, new places and a host of unseen dangers. I have acquired self-confidence and a faith that anything is possible with my dog at my side. Over the years, my dogs have always been a source of pride and pleasure to me, and I brag about them to my family and friends.

Today, the way young Rambo manoeuvres me through rush-hour traffic is wonderful. But it is all those little things like finding a table at a restaurant, finding empty spaces at the physical therapy clinic where I work, that mean so much more. Rambo is my sixth guide who arrived in June 2008 after Ruskin left me. He has already established himself in my life. I wish to thank all my friends at 'The Seeing Eye' for the support they have offered me over the years. Directions (516-520): Read the following passage and answer the questions.

It's odd to say this, but even as a four-year-old, I knew that this trip had changed my life forever.

I grew up watching BBC wildlife documentaries, so when my dad brought me to the Maasai Mara National Reserve in Kenya for a safari adventure to see lions, giraffes, elephants and other magnificent creatures thrive in their natural habitat, I was delirious with joy and a sense of wonder. I knew then that I wanted my life to revolve around wildlife. Not just to appreciate them, but to do everything I could to help look after them.

After years of honing my craft, I became a wildlife filmmaker and went into the middle of the Bornean rainforest to direct and produce 'Operation Sumatran Rhino', a National Geographic wildlife conservation documentary on the rescue of the last critically endangered Sumatran rhino of Malaysia. It took me three years to follow the conservation efforts and tell that story. The four-year-old in me was high-fiving himself.

Today, I am proud to share with you 'A wild life', Our Better World's first ever wildlife conservation series. A project half a year in the making which puts Asian conservation stories in the spotlight by showcasing the threats that wildlife face, and what we can do to make difference. A narrative adventure with the goal of getting more people to care for wildlife. These moments are major milestones in my life, which show my passion not just for wildlife but for storytelling too.

All the time in between, especially during the years spent learning how to tell stories, have forged me into what I am - an impact storyteller. Someone who believes that content is a means to an end. A catalyst to move you into action.

Directions (521-525) : Read the following passage and answer the questions.

Think about energy generation in the Middle East and you probably think of oil. But, in fact, the region is at the forefront of the race to decarbonise energy production.

Why is the oil-rich Middle East, which still generates most of its electricity from fossil fuels, becoming so keen on green alternatives? The plain fact is that leaders are facing up to climate change and the world's shift towards renewables.

The world's biggest solar plant has come up at the Noor Abu Dhabi. Sheikh Mohammed bin Zayed, appeared to embrace the change. "In 50 years, when we might have the last barrel of oil... I can tell you we will celebrate that moment," he said. The region has high levels of sunshine, making solar an attractive solution.

But Dubai has also commissioned the development of a hydroelectric power plant at the Hatta Dam in the Hajar Mountains. Solar energy will be used to pump water to a high-level reservoir during off-peak times, and stored water will be released to power the hydroelectric plant during the peaks.

The UAE is channelling its considerable oil revenues into alternative energy. By 2030, it plans to spend $160 billion on renewables, with the declared aim of generating two-thirds of its electricity from carbon-free sources by the middle of the century.

This ambitious target—among the most challenging in the region—has also been driven by concerns about climate change. The low-lying coastal cities of the UAE are particularly vulnerable to rising sea levels.

Last year, the World Economic Forum published a whitepaper calling for the removal of regulatory obstacles to increased innovation in sustainable energy generation. With two-thirds of greenhouse gases created by energy generation, the whitepaper suggested progress was currently too slow to avoid catastrophic climate change.

(SSC Stenographer Grade 'C' and 'D' Exam, 24.12.2020 Shift-I)

521. The article suggests that in the use of green energy :

- (1) the World Economic Forum is taking the lead.
- (2) Dubai is leading from the front.
- (3) the Middle East is taking positive steps.
- (4) the whole world is taking good steps.

522. As per the passage, 50 years from now :

- (1) the Middle East will have given up ideas of moving to renewable energy.
- (2) 100% energy will be generated from carbon-free sources.
- (3) some Middle East countries will be glad to have embraced green energy.
- (4) The disaster of climate change will in all certainty be averted.

523. The Middle East, rich in fossil energy, is now looking at :

- (1) exploring energy production from carbons
- (2) generating electricity from oil
- (3) reducing generation of power from solar energy
- (4) increasing generation of energy from green sources.

524. The Middle East countries have started producing green energy because :

- (1) revenue from oil is declining
- (2) they're concerned about the regulations on oil production
- (3) they're concerned about climate change
- (4) they have no oil left

South Korean are famously nonchalant and know how to "keep calm and carry on" whenever there is an adversity. The south Korean approach to Covid-19 could not have been more different.

On 16 January, the South Korean biotech executive Chun Jong-yoon grasped the reality about Covid-19 unfolding in China and directed his lab to work to stem the virus's inevitable spread; within days, his team developed detection kits now in high demand around the world. There has been a general consensus in South Korea to trust in and respect the advice coming from doctors and scientists.

Meanwhile, the South Korean government assumed the virus would hit. Experience with the 2003 Sars epidemic proved useful. As a result, South Korea has been effective in controlling the nation's mortality rate not through travel bans but instead through widespread rigorous quarantine measures and testing, now even exporting domestically produced test kits—such as the 51,000 diagnostic products sent this week to the United Arab Emirates. Most importantly, South Korea immediately began testing hundreds of thousands of asymptomatic people, including at drive-through centres. South Korea employed a central tracking app, Corona 100m, that publicly informs citizens of known cases within 100 metres of where they are. Surprisingly, a culture that has often rebelliously rejected authoritarianism has embraced intrusive measures.

Other nations would be wise to copy the South Korean model : on 29 February, 700 people tested positive in the primary South Korean outbreak city of Daegu. By 15 March, only 41 new cases were reported there. As expected based on the continued lack of immunity in the population, on 18 March, the number of cases began rising again, with Seoul bracing for the worst. Now, South Korea started to screen all people arriving at airports, Korean included.

South Koreans have universal health care and are accustomed to paying half what Americans pay for similar medical procedures.

526. Choose the steps taken by South Korea to control spread of the virus in the country :

- a. Stopped people from travelling
- b. Tested people extensively for the virus
- c. Made people remain in isolation
- d. Imported diagnostic kits
- e. Took advice from China
- (1) d. and e.
- (2) b. and d.
- (3) b. and c.
- (4) a. and c.

527. The most effective step taken by the South Korean government to stop the Covid virus from spreading was :

- (1) doing a scientific study of the virus
- (2) doing large scale testing to detect it
- (3) stopping people from travelling
- (4) asking scientists and doctors for advice

528. Corona 100m is :

- (1) the name of a centre for testing for the Coronavirus.
- (2) an epidemic that has affected many countries.
- (3) a virus that attacked people of Korea.
- (4) an app that informs Koreans about Covid cases around them.

529. From the passage, we can infer that an epidemic can be controlled if :

- (1) a country is rich and authoritarian
- (2) a country has foresight and is proactive
- (3) people have faith in their government
- (4) all countries work together

530. South Korea's approach to Covid-19 can be described as :

- (1) nervous when faced with a new challenge
- (2) agitated when it is confronted with health issues
- (3) very imposing on its people
- (4) very calm during the time of difficulty

With an impressive growth in yields, Telangana now seems to be transforming into the rice bowl of India. The Food Corporation of India (FCI) has procured 52 lakh tonnes of paddy from Telangana alone, which is more than half of the national target of 91 lakh tonnes. The state's harvests have nearly doubled in a year. Paddy production is up 93%, maize 95%, and cotton 74%, according to the Telangana Planning Department.

The state is also making its mark as a producer of paddy seed. "About 85% of our village's paddy is of a fine variety that farmers in MP, Haryana, Bengal, and Bihar use as seed," said a farmer in Ankasapur Village in Nizamabad district. The seed crop sells at a premium over the state's minimum support price for paddy.

"What's your name, boy?" said the gentleman in the high chair.

Oliver was frightened at the sight of so many gentlemen, which made him tremble and speak in a very low and hesitating voice.

"Listen to me. You know you're an orphan, I suppose? And that you were brought up by the parish, don't you?"

"Yes sir," replied Oliver, weeping bitterly.

"I hope you say your prayers every night," said another gentleman in a gruff voice, "and pray for the people who feed you, and take care of you".

"Yes, sir," stammered the boy.

"Well! You have come here to be educated, and taught a useful trade," said the red-faced gentleman in the high chair.

Poor Oliver! He little thought, as he lay sleeping, happily unconscious of things around him, that the board had that very day arrived at a decision which would exercise the most material influence over all his future fortunes.

But they had. They believed the workhouse was a regular place of public entertainment for the poorer classes; a tavern where there was nothing to pay; a public breakfast, dinner, tea, and supper all the year round, a brick and mortar place, where it was all play and no work.

"Oh!" said the board, looking very knowing, "we are the fellows to set this to rights, we'll stop it all, in no time."

So, they established the rule, that all poor people should be starved by a gradual process in the house. The waterworks were asked to lay on an unlimited supply of water; a corn-factory asked to supply small quantities of oatmeal; and it was decided to issue three meals of thin gruel a day, with an onion twice a week, and half a roll of bread on Sundays.

Before the advent of soap, the primary cleansing agent in ancient India was taken from soap nuts (reetha) from the plant Sapindus saponaria. The literal translation of Sapindus is sap = soap and indus = India. In other words, soap from India.

The nut was used in ancient China as well and its usage spread from India to Middle Asia and then Europe. Soap nuts are boiled to soften them up, and then crushed to filter out the essence which contains the all-important cleaning chemicals. It lathers but in small quantities. Ancient India also used shikaj or shikakai (a variant of the acacia plant) as a hair and body cleanser.

The skincare routines of ancient Indians involved the addition of a variety of herbs such as turmeric, tulsi (holy basil), neem (bark and leaves), lotus petals and sandalwood paste amongst others which were common ingredients in their skincare creams.

Another worth mentioning soap in skin care is the Aleppo soap, which originated from the Syrian city of Aleppo. This is considered one of the purest soaps as it is made with all natural ingredients. Aleppo soap does not dry the skin. It also moisturises and nourishes the skin and is purported to benefit a host of skin problems such as eczema, skin breakouts, inflammatory skin conditions, insect bites, and skin infections. However, the exact origin of the soap is lost in time with the earliest written record dating as far back as the 8th Century AD.

After the Crusades, European nation adopted Aleppo soap and started producing their own variations. Aleppo, the ancient city of Aleppo thrived on trade for thousands of years, famous for being the endpoint of the Silk Road and Road trade route that bridged the East and the West.

Generations of merchant families and manufacturers made the unique soap for thousands of years and the formulation has remained surprisingly unchanged in all this time retaining its original form. Olive oil, sodium hydroxide and water are the main ingredients in all this oil, sodium hydroxide and water are the main ingredients of this soap. Bay (Laurus nobilis) has remarkable antibacterial and antifungal properties, and could explain some of the benefits of this soap in conditions such as acne, insect bites and skin infections.

Directions (546-550): Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

Rajasthan's farmers have been banging plates and lighting fires these days. It is their desperate attempt to scare away the swarms of migratory locusts invading their fields and eating away crops. The pest attack has come as a double blow for farmers already reeling under the impact of the Covid lockdown.

Millions of locusts, covering 1-4 sq. km of the skyline, have reached 10 of the state's 33 districts within three weeks of being first spotted on April 30. Last year, yellow locusts had entered India from Pakistan in the second half of May. The attack had originated from Yemen, coming all the way to West Asia and Pakistan and then India. Creating havoc in 17 countries en route.

With the harvest nearly over in Rajasthan, the invading population of grasshoppers this May is feeding mainly on growing cotton crop sown last month, vegetables and fodder. State officials, through, fear damage to the young millet and rice crops due in July and August if the locusts breed.

Flying in through the Pakistan border near Jaisalmer, the locust can cover 200-250 km in a day if they get wind support. Presently, the dust storms sweeping parts of Rajasthan are aiding their flight. Official said the Union Agriculture ministry's Locusts Warning Organisation (LWO) is in the process of acquiring 60 vehicles with mounted insecticide sprayers from abroad by July. Ten such vehicles were purchased this January.

Immature pink locusts are very active, which is why they have reached the interiors of Rajasthan [from Pakistan] so quickly," says K.L. Gurjar, deputy director, LWO. Their metabolism slows down during winters, but in summers, they can fly from 4 am to 8 pm, covering long distances and consuming more crops along the way than mature locusts would.

The LWO has put 10 insecticide-spraying vehicles on the job in Rajasthan. The Rajasthan government has provided rented tractors, on which insecticide sprayers are mounted, and also the manpower to man them. The Centre-state joint operation has so far cleared a few hundred sq km of fields of the locusts. Preliminary estimates put the loss to crops at a few crore rupees.

State officials say there is an urgent need to contain the pink locusts before they start breeding in the next few weeks. Indiscriminate aerial spraying of insecticide is ill-advised as this can damage crops as well as affect human settlements.

One of the strategies being considered now is to use fixed-wing aircraft for ultra-low volume spraying of chemicals. The state government may request for such aerial sorties by the air force. Drones have limited capabilities as they can carry only about 20 litres of insecticide at a time, making them effective only over small areas.

(SSC Stenographer Grade 'C' and 'D' Exam, 15.11.2021 Shift II)

546. The main theme of the passage is:
(1) the damage done by the locusts
(2) measures for dealing with the locusts
(3) breeding of locusts
(4) invasion of locusts in Rajasthan.
547. After reading this passage it can be said that it is:

(3) Fodder (4) Vegetables

(1) Insecticide-spraying vehicles
(2) Fixed-wing aircraft for spraying of chemicals

- (3) Drones for spraying areas with insecticide
(4) Rented tractor mounted with insecticide sprayers
550. It can be inferred from the passage that the present swarm of locusts consists of
(1) yellow immature locusts
(2) yellow mature locusts
(3) pink mature locusts
(4) pink immature locusts

Directions (551-555): Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow.

When consuming your favourite fruit is forbidden by your doctor or dietician, it is time to find out why rather than trying to have more of it on the sly. Conventional diet advice for weight watchers and diabetics puts mangoes in the red list, and not without reason. Keeping scientific information about mangoes in mind, recommendations about the fruit warrant a relook. This is because of its impact on body weight, blood sugar and health. It's true that ripe mangoes are high in carbohydrates, sugars and have a high glycaemic index. One of the seventh most popular fruits worldwide, it provides roughly 80 kilocalories per 100g (a medium-sized ripe mango would carry about 130-150 calories), which mainly come from carbohydrates (20 per cent).

Due to high sugar content, mangoes are high in calories. But does this mean that diabetics and weight watchers should be banned from having it? The answer is no, if one adjusts for calories, i.e. substitutes it with an equivalent amount of calories and carbohydrates in the meal.

Better still, combine it with a low-glycaemic food. Low glycaemic foods include pulses, legumes, low-fat dairy (milk, curd), vegetables, nuts and seeds. So mangoes can make a safe entry into the diet, if one is able to keep the caloric intake and carbohydrates constant, i.e. take the right amounts. With over 2,500 varieties around the world, the popularity of mangoes clearly lies in its aromatic sweetness. This tropical fruit also can boast of a huge array of impressive health benefits.

The mango is known to be an excellent source of many vitamins such as vitamin C (ascorbic acid), B vitamins (thiamine, riboflavin, and niacin), and Vitamin A (β-carotene). Ripe mangoes generally possess a higher number of phenolics, researchers say. This makes mangoes a good source of antioxidants with anti-cancer and anti-inflammatory properties. With reasonably good fibre content, it provides a good combination of soluble and insoluble fibre. Soluble fibre is good for digestion and its insoluble variant is good for management of blood cholesterol and sugar levels.

But before you start planning a mango party, there is need for caution. Remember that mangoes, being high on sugars, predominantly fructose, should be consumed in appropriate portions. This is true particularly for weight watchers, diabetics and those with high cholesterol levels.

Indian mathematician Nikhil Srivastava, working at the University of California in Berkeley, is among the winners of the Prestigious 2021 Michael and Sheila Held Prize, announced last week by the US National Academy of Sciences (NAS). Adam W. Marcus, EPFL (Swiss Federal Institute of Technology, Lausanne) and Daniel Alan Spielman, Yale University, are the other two winners.

Marcus, Spielman and Srivastava solved longstanding questions on the Kadison-Singer problem and on Ramanujan graphs, and in the process uncovered a deep new connection between linear algebra, geometry of polynomials, and graph theory that has inspired the next generation of theoretical computer scientists, the NAS said in a statement.

An Indian national, Nikhil was born in New Delhi in November 1983 and has attended educational institutions across the world-Syria, UK, Saudi Arabia, and US - as his father was an Indian Foreign Services officer, who has served as the Indian ambassador to Uganda and Denmark. At present, Nikhil is an associate professor of mathematics at UC Berkeley. The strain, Tropical Race 4 (TR4), was first identified in Taiwan, and has jumped from Asia to the Middle East and Africa, reaching as far as Latin America. Scientists are describing it as the equivalent of Covid-19 in bananas. As the coronavirus disease outbreak rages on, 'fusarium wilt TR4', a novel fungus strain that has devastated plantations across the globe this year/ is setting up new hotspots and threatening output in India, the world's largest producer of bananas. It cripples plantations by first attacking the levels, which turn yellow from their trailing edges before wilting away. There is no effective remedy yet.

"One could say it is the Covid-19 of the plant world. Hotspots have been found in Bihar and Uttar Pradesh, which we are trying to contain," said S. Uma, the director of National Research Centre for Bananas (NRCB), Trichy.

According to the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations, TR4 is one of the 'the most destructive of all plant diseases'. As with Covid-19, there is no treatment yet. So, scientists recommend biosecurity measures including 'plant quarantine' to slow its spread. The spreading disease has jeopardised the $26 billion global banana trade.

A healthy snack, banana is the world's most globally exported fruit, according to the FAO. That's a reason for worry as the disease is breaching borders through imports.

India produces 27 million tonnes of bananas annually and grows about 100 varieties. TR4 has infected the most commonly sold variety, the one you mostly likely have for breakfast: Grand Nain a curvy yellow fruit.

Inability to contain TR4 could jolt farm incomes and push up banana prices. One medium banana (126 gms) provides about 110 calories, 0 gram fat, 1 gram protein, 28 grams carbohydrate, 15 grams sugar (naturally occurring), 3 grams fibre and 450 mg potassium and trace quantities of vitamin C and B6, according to the Hyderabad-based National Institute of Nutrition.

Most of India's bananas are consumed domestically. As an exporter, the largest exporter, is currently the epicentre and scientists haven't been able to ascertain how TR4 entered India. Fusarium wilt is not new. It entirely wiped out Gros Michel, the dominant export variety of bananas in 1950s. It came in response to that a new resistant variety, Grand Nain, came up. That has now fallen to TR4. The challenge is to now identify or develop new resistant varieties. That's the only way to manage it, according to Uma, until an effective agent is found.

The Indian Council of Agricultural Research is advocating a set of measures, known as 'biopriming'. It has asked farmers whose plantations have been affected to abandon them. They must grow rice for a year or two before returning to banana. "That way the chain is broken," said R Selvarajan, a scientist with the NRCB.

Anna Pavlovna's drawing room was gradually filling. The highest Petersburg society was assembled there: people differing widely in age and character but alike in the social circle to which they belonged.

Prince Vasil's daughter, the beautiful Helene, wore a ball dress and her badge as maid of honor. The youthful little Princess Bolenskaya, known as the most fascinating woman in Petersburg was also there. Vasil's son, Hippolyte, Mortemart and many others had also come.

To each new arrival Anna Pavlovna said, "You have not yet seen my aunt, "or "You do not know my aunt?" and very gravely conducted him or her a little old lady, wearing large bows of ribbon in her cap, who had come sailing in from another room as soon as the guests began to arrive; and slowly turning her eyes from the visitor to her aunt. Anna Pavlovna mentioned each one's name and then left them.

Each visitor performed the ceremony of greeting this old aunt whom not of them knew, not one of them wanted to know, and not one of them cared about. Anna Pavlovna observed these greetings with mournful and solemn interest and silent approval. The aunt spoke to each of them in the same words, about their health and her own.

And each visitor, though politeness prevented his showing impatience, left the old women with a sense of relief at having performed a vexatious duty and did not return to her the whole evening.

If you pay close attention to soap advertisements, you may hear of its pH value being claimed perfect for human skin. But is there really such a thing? Let's start at the beginning. pH (potential Hydrogen) is defined as the concentration of hydrogen ions in a solution. pH value ranges between 0 and 14.7 is the neutral point, 0 being the most acidic and 14 being the most alkaline. More importantly, your skin isn't exactly pH 5.5; it falls in a range between 4.0 and 7.0, depending on diverse factors like the body part, age, genetics, ethnicity, and environment conditions.

So, are products formulated at pH 5.5 perfect for skin? The short answer: not really! First, parameters like texture and other ingredients indicate a cleanser's quality, much better than pH alone. Second, though the skin pH rises slightly immediately after cleaning even with plain water, it reverts to its mild acidic pH in an hour. Healthy skin quickly rebalances the 'acid mantle' - a protective layer over the skin

- and is unaffected in the long term by the cleanser's pH. Skin modulates pH, making skin products function optimally. So, why market pH 5.5 products as 'perfect'? Well, for certain skin types (e.g., oily skin) and certain skin conditions (like acne), an increase in pH can aggravate these skin situations. This might lead to an interpretation that a skin care product needs to be at a 5.5 pH for optimum cleansing. Hence, skincare experts have expressed reservations about pH being the sole criterion of product safety and 'acid mantle' preservation when factors including plain water may contribute to the same. Thus, an ideal product is almost impossible to define. So, look well beyond pH alone.

(SSC Stenographer Grade 'C' and 'D' Exam, 15.11.2021 Shift III)

571. According to the passage, the 'acid mantle' refers to:

- a layer over the skin that is balanced by healthy skin in terms of its pH
- an acidic skin product with the right pH
- a layer over the skin that keeps the skin pH at 5.5
- an acidic cleansing agent with a pH of 5.5

572. According to the passage, the pH value of human skin is generally:

- between 7 and 14
- between 4 and 7
- between 0 and 7
- between 4 and 7

573. 'Is there really such a thing?' 'such a thing' the author is referring to:

- the perfect soap for all skin types
- the perfect pH value for human skin
- soap advertisements
- close attention paid to advertisements

574. Which of the following is NOT true according to the passage?

- Human skin adjusts the pH so that a cleansing agent functions optimally.
- An increase in pH can aggravate certain skin conditions
- The best way to judge the safety of a skin care product is by its pH
- There is no perfect pH for the human skin.

575. Let's start at the beginning. 'By this, the author means that:

- we should start discussing soap advertisements
- we should first answer the question 'Is there such a thing?'
- we should look at the characteristics of a good soap
- we should start with the basic facts before going into the issue

The two great empires of Lilliput and Blefuscu have been engaged in a most obstinate war for six-and-thirty moons past. It began upon the following occasion. It is allowed on all hands that the primitive way of breaking eggs, before we eat them, was upon the larger end; but his present majesty's grandfather, while he was a boy, going to eat an egg, and breaking it according to the ancient practice, happened to cut one of his fingers. Whereupon the emperor his father published an edict, commanding all his subjects, upon great penalties, to break the smaller end of their eggs. The people so highly resented this law, that our histories tell us, there have been six rebellions raised on that account, wherein one emperor lost his life, and another his crown.

These civil commotions were constantly fomented by the monarchs of Blefuscu; and when they were quelled, the exiles always fled for refuge to that empire. It is computed that eleven thousand persons have at several times suffered death, rather than submit to break their eggs at the smaller end. Many hundred large volumes have been published upon this controversy; but the books of the Big-endians have been long forbidden; and the whole party rendered incapable by law of holding employments.

During the course of these troubles, the emperors of Blefuscu did frequently expostulate by their ambassadors, accusing us of making a schism in religion, by offending against a fundamental doctrine of our great prophet Lustrog. This, however, is thought to be a mere strain upon the text, for the words are these: 'that all true believers break their eggs at the convenient end.' And which is the convenient end, seems, in my humble opinion to be left to every man's conscience, or at least in the power of the chief magistrate to determine. Now, the Big-endian exiles have found so much credit in the emperor of Blefuscu's court, and so party here at home, that a bloody war has been carried on between the two empires for six-and-thirty moons, with various success; during which time we have lost forty capital ships, and a much greater number of smaller vessels, together with thirty thousand of our best seamen and soldiers; and the damage received by the enemy is reckoned to be somewhat greater than ours.

However, they have now equipped a numerous fleet, and are just preparing to make a descent upon us; and his imperial majesty, placing great confidence in your valour and strength, has commanded me to lay this account of his affairs before you." Thus spoke the Principal Secretary I desired the secretary to present my humble duty to the emperor; and to let him know that I thought it would not become me, who was a foreigner, to interfere with parties, but I was ready, with the hazard of my life, to defend his person and state against all invaders.

578. What inference can be drawn from the narrative?

- It is important to follow rules.

What was the result of the edict published by the emperor of Lilliput's great grandfather?

- People attacked the emperor and overthrew him
- People rebelled against the new law
- People abandoned Lilliput and left for Blefuscu
- People readily agreed to follow his command

Fishing traps, baskets, cradles, bridges, rainproof umbrellas, mats, musical instruments, water pipes, and many other things have always used the bamboo in numerous ways. It is used for house construction, fencing and in the making of bullock carts. Low-cost domestic furniture and a vast range of domestic utility items made of bamboo can be seen in any of our bazaars. But we do not easily realise the countless little ways this modest material comes to be used by rural people. One can see it being used in the blacksmith's bellows, or as bamboo pins in carpentry or in the fabrication of toys in village markets. But to the British foresters the multi-dimensional role that 'the forest weed' played in the local Indian environment was of no account, as it did not figure in forest revenues. Bamboo also interfered with the growing of teak, an essential part of their colonial forest policy. It was only in the 1920s that the British realised that by mincing bamboo into millimetre sheets, cooking it in chemicals, pulping and flattening it, they could produce sheets of paper. This would bring the increased forest revenue and 'development' (as defined by them) to the so-called backward regions of India.

However, they chose to ignore the consequences this activity would have on the health of the forest. So while bamboo was sold at high prices to basket weavers, it was heavily subsidised for the paper industry. Even after independence, supplying bamboo at extremely low prices to Indian paper mills became a 'patriotic' duty of the government, and bamboo supplies were assured for decades at unchanged prices. The disaster that this would cause to the forests, and to the craftspeople, still remained unforeseen.

Colonialism affected forests all across India and marginalised their inhabitants and the traditional occupations they practised. As late as the 1970s, the World Bank proposed that 4,600 hectares of natural Sal forest should be replaced by tropical pine to provide pulp for the paper industry. It was only after protests by local environmentalists that the project was stopped. Colonialism was therefore not only about repression, it was also a story of displacement, impoverishment and ecological crisis.

(SSC Delhi Police SI, CAPFs SI & CISF ASI (CPO) Exam, 24.11.2020 Shift II)

581. The varied uses of bamboo were disregarded by the British till the 1920s because

- they did not use bamboo products at all.

- the bamboo products were cheaply available.
- it was used in the backward regions only.

582. What does the 'forest weed' refer to?

- Sal
- Bamboo
- Pine
- Teak

583. Which of these is NOT a step in the production of paper?

584. Bamboo is referred to as 'modest material' because:

- it is available in abundance in India
- the British believed it was worthless
- it can be easily shredded and reduced to a pulp
- it is inexpensive and not highly acclaimed

585. What was considered to be a patriotic duty of the government after Independence?

- Handling the ecological crisis in India
- Replacing Sal forests by tropical pines
- Supplying bamboo at low prices to paper mills
- Preventing the displacement of foresters

During the decade after liberalisation floriculture industries took giant steps in the export arena. This era has seen a dynamic shift from sustenance production to commercial production. The area under floriculture production in India is around 249 thousand hectares with a production of 1659 thousand tonnes loose flowers and 484 thousand tonnes cut flowers. Floriculture is now commercially cultivated in several states with Tamil Nadu (20%), Karnataka (13.5%) West Bengal (12.2%) having gone ahead of other producing states like Madhya Pradesh, Mizoram, Gujarat, Andhra Pradesh, Odisha, Jharkhand, Karyana, Assam and Chhattisgarh.

Government of India has identified floriculture as a sunrise industry and accorded it 100% export oriented status. Owing to steady increase in the demand of flowers, floriculture has become one of the important commercial trades in agriculture. Hence, commercial floriculture has emerged as hi-tech activity-taking place under controlled climatic conditions inside greenhouse. Floriculture in India, is being viewed as a high growth industry. Commercial floriculture is becoming important from the export angle. The liberalisation of industrial and trade policies paved the way for development of export-oriented production of cut flowers. The new seed policy had already made it feasible to import planting material of international varieties. It has been found that commercial floriculture has higher potential per unit area than most of the field crops and is therefore a lucrative business. Indian floriculture industry has been shifting from traditional flowers to cut flowers for export purposes. The liberalised economy has given an impetus to the Indian entrepreneurs for establishing export oriented floriculture units under controlled climatic conditions.

Indian total export of floriculture was Rs. 571.38 crores/₹81.94 million in 2018-19. The major importing countries were United States, Netherlands, United Kingdom, Germany and United Arab Emirates. There are more than 300 export-oriented units in India. More than 50% of the floriculture units are based in Karnataka, Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu. With the technical collaborations from foreign companies, the Indian floriculture industry is poised to increase its share in world trade.

A book by the Indian ambassador in the Netherlands highlights the historical and current exchanges that define the relationship between the two countries. The first book in which Malayalam appears in print is the 'Hortus Malabaricus' (Garden of Malabar), a 12-volume treatise, written in Latin and published in Amsterdam from 1678 to 1693. Compiled over a period of 30 years, under directions from Hendrik van Rheede, a naturalist and colonial administrator, who was at the time the governor of Dutch Malabar, the Hortus Malabaricus gives a comprehensive account of the flora of the Malabar region, along with their properties and detailed sketches. Malayalam appears in this multilingual book, along with other languages that were common currency at the time, including Arabic and Konkani.

The Hortus Malabaricus was an important document of its time, as Venu Rajamony writes in his new book 'India and the Netherlands: Past, Present and Future', 'the product of a multinational and multicultural team of botanical experts.' Yet, it remained lost to the public until a botany scholar from Calicut, KS Manilal, learned Latin and translated it first into English in 2003 and into Malayalam in 2008. Highlighting such instances of the Indo Dutch artistic and cultural exchange through the last 400 years was the prime reason why Rajamony, who has been the Ambassador of India to the Netherlands, thought of writing this book. The book was released on 30 September 2019.

The connection between India and the Netherlands begins with the Dutch Golden Age, when the Netherlands flourished as a centre for commercial and artistic endeavours. Following Spain, Portugal and Great Britain, it also emerged as one of the great maritime nations of the world, establishing a far-flung empire thanks to the ventures of the Dutch East India Company. Over the course of his research for the book, Rajamony says, one of the things that surprised him was how taken the great Dutch master Rembrandt was with Indian miniature paintings, collecting them and even making drawings inspired by them. "I was pleasantly surprised to discover this as Rembrandt is considered an absolute master, who would only have made original, very rare that a master like him would copy other artworks," says Rajamony. According to him, this fact is indicative of the high esteem in which Indian art was held in Europe.

First, thousands of flamingos coloured the Talawe wetlands near NRI Complex in Navi Mumbai pink during the lockdown, their numbers bolstered by the sheer lack of human activity. Now, the water in part of the wetland itself has turned pink, probably due to an explosive blooming of red algae that thrives in saline water, especially as the summer picks up and the wetland loses water.

The deep pink water, located towards the south-eastern end of the wetland, was spotted on 14 May 2020. The pink water was not there till late last week. The bloom has been identified as a rare and first-of-its-kind occurrence for Mumbai Metropolitan Region by Bombay Natural History Society (BNHS) that plans to take samples of the water for study. However, a local resident, Seema Tania from NRI Complex, Seawoods, said she had spotted the pink wash across a much larger area at the same creek in 2016. "Almost 500-600m patch of the creek turned bright pink and we thought chemicals had been dumped in the creek," she said.

BNHS and independent microbiologists presume that the colour is from microscopic algae. "Owing to high salinity in the area, it looks like an algal bloom. Our researchers have never witnessed something like this along Mumbai creeks," said Deepak Apte, director, BNHS. "Around the world, such a phenomena has been observed regularly with red algae but it has to be investigated how it has appeared along the Mumbai creek".

Flamingos are known to feed on this algae, crustaceans, shrimp, and aquatic plants, which gives them the pink colour, said Apte. Dr p Sathiyaselvam, assistant director (wetland conservation), BNHS said, "This is clearly an algal bloom. We have observed the same at the northern portion of Chilika Lake (in Odisha) during early winter months over the years, and also towards the northern end of wetlands in Thoothukudi in Tamil Nadu." "This is a natural phenomenon. Vigorous growth of algae or bacteria having beta-carotene gives this type of characteristic colouration to the water. It is also related to increased evaporation, salinity, and the current hot and humid weather conditions," said Rahul Khot, assistant director (in-charge of the flamingo monitoring program).

Ornithologist, naturalist and writer Sunoj Monga said a similar discolouration of water with a pink hue was witnessed at a flamingo habitat in Porbandar in May 2007. "This happened at the edges of the creek cramped with flamingos with high salinity displaying a pinkish maroon wash to it." A similar example of what has been observed in Navi Mumbai was recently witnessed across a massive stretch at the Edgars Creek in Melbourne, Australia, that started on 10 May and intensified subsequently. The source of the pink water is being investigated. The Epoch Times reported. Other examples of changing water colour to pink across a much larger area has been observed at Cameron Falls in Waterton Lakes National Park, Canada and the Dead Sea, a salt lake between Israel and Jordan, to name a few.

Directions (601-605): Read the following passage and answer the questions given after it.

Love of power is, perhaps, an even stronger motive than fear in enticing nations to pursue irrational policies. Although individual boastfulness is considered to be bad manners, national boastfulness is admired at any rate, by the compatriots of those who practise it. Throughout history, great nations have been led to disaster by unwillingness to admit that their power had limits. World conquest has been a will-o-the-wisp by which one nation after another has been led to its downfall. Hitler's Germany is the most recent example. Going backwards in time, we find many other examples, of which Napoleon, Genghis Khan, and Attila are the most noteworthy. When Khrushchev threatens to obliterate the West, I am reminded of past examples of a similar folly.

To spread ruin, misery and death throughout one's own country as well as that of the enemy is the act of mad men. If East and West could cease their enmity, they could devote their scientific skill to their own welfare, to living without the burden of fear that only their own folly has caused. For it is in the hearts of men that the evil lies. The trouble lies in the minds often, and it is in enlightening the minds of men that the cure must be sought.

There are those who say: "War is part of human nature, and human nature cannot be changed. If war means the end of man, we must sigh and submit." This is always said by those whose sigh is hypocritical. It is undeniable that there are men and nations to whom violence is attractive, but it is not the case that anything in human nature makes it impossible to restrain such men and nations. Individuals who have a taste for homicide are restrained by the criminal law, and most of us do not find life intolerable because we are not allowed to commit murders. The same is true of nations. Sweden has never been at war since 1814.

None of the Swedes that I have known has shown any sign of suffering from thwarted instinct for lack of war. Political contests in a civilized country often raise just the kind of issues that would lead to war if they were between different nations. Not long ago, private disputes were often settled by duels, and those who upheld duelling maintained that its abolition would be contrary to human nature. They forgot, as present upholders of war forget, that what is called 'human nature' is, in the main, the result of custom and tradition and education, and, in civilized men, only a very tiny fraction is due to primitive instinct. If the world could live for a few generations without war, would come to seem as absurd as duelling has come to seem to us.

Western MP has received 1,335.4 millimetres of average rainfall from June 1 to September 25, 58% more than the region's historical normal of 845.3 mm for this period. However, the real story lies in the month-wise figures. In June, the opening month of the southwest monsoon season, the rains were actually 25.6% below the long-period average. In July, they were 31.2% above average. That surplus rose to 63.6% in August, while a whopping 158% more, so far in September.

The monsoon has taken its toll mainly on soyabean. According to the Union agriculture ministry's data, a total this leguminous oilseed in the current kharif season, with the bulk of it accounted for by MP (55.16 lh), Maharashtra (39.595 lh) and Rajasthan (10.608 lh). Within MP, the main soyabean-growing districts are Ujjain, Dewas, Indore, Dhar, Ratlam, Mandsaur, Rajgarh, Shajapur, Sehore and Vidisha. The crop in low-lying areas is the one that has been worst affected.

"Farmers who had sown early-maturity (80-90 days duration) varieties such as JS 9560 and JS 2034 just after mid-June will take the biggest hit. Their crop would already have matured; the longer it remains in the field, the more the chances of the grain rotting. Also these farmers will not be able to save this grain for using as seed next year," admits V S Bhatia, director of the Indian Institute of Soyabean Research at Indore.

On the other hand, longer-duration varieties maturing in 95-105 days, like JS 20-69, NRC 86 and JS 97-52, are unlikely to suffer major yield loss, as their grain is not fully ripe yet for harvesting. Moreover, since the rains were poor in June, much of sowing anyway took place in July, thereby further reducing the likelihood of damage. "The vegetative growth and pod formation has been very good. As of now, the overall loss may be 10-15% and the areas where the crop is still good should compensate for those badly impacted," adds Bhatia.

(SSC Delhi Police, CAPFs SI & CISF ASI (CPO) Exam (Paper-III), 08.11.2021 Shift II)

606. Why would the farmers who sowed their crop in June be the worst hit?

- They had sowed a late maturing variety of soyabean.
- They sowed their crop in low lying areas.
- When they sowed their crop there wasn't enough rain.
- Their crop would already be mature and could rot in the rain.

607. Which of the following is a short-duration variety of soyabean maturing in 80-90 days?

- JS 9560
- NRC 86
- JS 97-52
- JS 20-69

608. Which statement is NOT true according to the passage?

- The longer-duration variety of soyabean will not suffer much due to this excessive rain.
- The rainfall in June was poor in MP.
- In July, the rainfall was 63.6% above average.
- The crops in low-lying areas were worst affected by rains.

609. This passage is mainly about:

- June

Panchen Lama was just six years old when he was allegedly abducted by the Chinese government on 17 May 1995, along with his family members, after he was recognised by the Dalai Lama as the reincarnation of the 11th Panchen Lama.

On the 25th anniversary of his disappearance, the Tibetan government-in-exile on Sunday demanded China to release the 11th Panchen Lama Gedhun Choekyi Nyima, considered to be a reincarnation of Bodhisattva Amitabha. In a statement issued here, the President of the exiled government, Lobsang Sangay, said China's abduction of the Panchen Lama and forcible denial of his religious identity and the right to practice in his monastery is not only a violation of religious freedom but also a gross violation of human rights.

After orchestrating the disappearance of the 11th Panchen Lama, Sangay alleged that China, a self-declared atheist government and infamous for its persecution of religious groups, placed a young boy, Gyaltzen Norbu, as their own 11th Panchen Lama.

"This politically-motivated action failed, however, to displace the position of the true Panchen Lama from the hearts and minds of the Tibetan people. For Tibetans and Buddhists around the world, Gedhun Choekyi Nyima will always be the true Panchen Lama," he added.

Today marks the 25th anniversary of the 11th Panchen Lama's disappearance, said Sangay, adding that 25 years is a significant time in an individual's life.

He said the communist government must honour its claim of ethnic harmony in China by fulfilling the aspirations of the Tibetan people.

"It must right the wrong and release the 11th Panchen Lama along with his family, Chadrul Rinpoche, and all Tibetans unjustly imprisoned," he said while appealing to the international community to make a concerted effort to press China to release Nyima and resolve the critical human rights situation in Tibet.

Migaloo is by far one of the world's most recognisable whales, because he is completely white. Thanks to genetic sampling of Migaloo's skin, scientists have identified that he's male, and his albino appearance is a result of a variation in the gene responsible for the colour of his skin.

Simply by looking different, Migaloo has become an icon within Australia's east coast humpback whale population. Indeed, Migaloo has his own Twitter account with over 10,000 followers, and website where fans can lodge sightings and learn more about humpback whales.

He was first discovered in 1991 off Byron Bay, Australia, and has since played hide and seek for many years, with many not knowing where or when he'll show up next. He's even surprised Kiwi fans by showing up in New Zealand waters. With the last official sighting two years ago, the time has once again come for us to ask - where is Migaloo?

Already this year there have been false sightings, such as a near all white whale spotted off New South Wales. To make things more confusing, regular looking humpbacks can trick whale watchers when they flip upside down, due to their white bellies.

Humans are social animals by nature. To prosper in life, we require the company of others, and the strength of our bonds has a significant influence on our mental health and happiness. Being socially linked to people may help you cope with stress, worry and depression, increase your self-esteem, bring comfort and joy, prevent loneliness, and even add years to your life. On the other hand, a lack of strong social relationships might put your mental and emotional health at risk. Many of us use social media sites like Facebook, Twitter, Snapchat, YouTube and Instagram to locate and communicate with one another in today's society. While each has its own set of advantages, it's vital to realise that social media will never be a substitute for genuine human interaction. In order to trigger the hormones that relieve stress and make you feel happier, healthier, and more optimistic, you must interact with individuals in person. Spending too much time on social media, ironically for a tool supposed to bring people closer together, can instead make you feel more lonely and isolated, and aggravate mental health issues like anxiety and depression. If you're spending too much time on social media and are experiencing emotions of unhappiness, discontent, irritation or loneliness, it's time to re-evaluate your online habits and establish a healthier balance.

Because social media is such a new technology, little study has been done to determine the long-term effects, good or ill, of its use. Multiple studies, however, have linked extensive social media use to an increased risk of melancholy, anxiety, loneliness, self-harm and even suicide ideation. The purpose of social media sites is to capture your interest, keep you online, and keep you checking your screen for updates. It's how businesses generate money. However, much like a gambling addiction or a nicotine, alcohol or drug addiction, social media use may lead to psychological cravings. When you get a like, a share, or a positive reaction to a post, your brain releases dopamine, the same 'reward' chemical that you get after winning at a slot machine. Eating, drinking or smoking a cigarette for example. The more you're rewarded, the more time you want to spend on social media, even if it has negative consequences in other areas of your life.

It is not an exaggeration to say that the question of where and when the Black Death, the deadliest pandemic ever, originated is one of the biggest mysteries in human history. After all, the Black Death was the first wave of the second plague pandemic of the 14th to early 19th centuries. It killed some 50-60% of the population in Europe, the Middle East and North Africa and an unaccountable number of people in Central Asia.

Different proposals, based on competing theories, have been put forward. But in 2017, I came across some records describing an intriguing medieval cemetery in Kara-Djagh, Chüy Valley, northern Kyrgyzstan, which I suspected may hold the key. As part of a multidisciplinary team co-led by Maria Spyrou at University of Tübingen, we have now investigated several specimens from individuals buried at that site - and come up with an answer.

The idea that the Black Death originated in the east - territories overlapping, roughly speaking, Central Asia, Mongolia and China - dates back to the contemporaries of the pandemic in Europe and the Islamic world. The modern Islamic Chinese origin theory dates back to at least to in 1965 and a publication about the history of Central Asia by French scholar Joseph de Guignes.

While there is no denying that the world loves a winner, it is important that you recognise the signs of stress in your behaviour and be healthy enough to enjoy your success. Stress can strike anytime, in a fashion that may leave you unaware of its presence in your life. While a certain amount of pressure is necessary for performance, it is important to be able to recognise your individual limit. For instance, there are some individuals who accept competition in a healthy fashion. There are others who collapse into weeping wrecks before an exam or on comparing mark sheets and finding that their friend has scored better.

Stress is a body reaction to any demands or changes in its internal and external environment. Whenever there is a change in the external environment such as temperature, pollutants, humidity and working conditions, it leads to stress. In these days of competition when a person makes up his mind to surpass what has been achieved by others, leading to an imbalance between demands and resources, it causes psycho-social stress. It is a part and parcel of everyday life.

Stress has a different meaning, depending on the stage of life you are in. The loss of a toy or a reprimand from the parents might create a stress shock in a child. An adolescent who fails in the examination may feel as if everything has been lost and life has no further meaning. In an adult the loss of his or her companion, job or professional failure may appear as if there is nothing more to be achieved.

Such signs appear in the attitude and behaviour of the individual, such as muscle tension in various parts of the body, palpitation and high blood pressure, indigestion, and hyperacidity.

Ultimately, the result is self-destructive behaviour such as eating and drinking too much, smoking excessively, relying on tranquilisers. There are other signs of stress such as trembling, shaking, nervous blinking, dryness of throat and mouth and difficulty in swallowing.

The professional under stress behaves as if he is a perfectionist. It leads to depression, lethargy, and weakness. Periodic mood shifts also indicate the stress status of the students, executives, and professionals.

The number of Indian students going abroad for higher studies has increased by 68.79 per cent in the past year, according to data provided by the Minister of State in the Ministry of Education, Subhas Sarkar. As per the data provided by him in the Lok Sabha, the number of Indians enrolled in foreign varsities increased from 4.44 lakh in 2021 to 7.5 lakh in 2022. He clarified that while the Bureau of Immigration and Ministry of Home Affairs maintain departure and arrival data of Indians, there is no index for capturing the category of Indians going abroad for higher education.

"Purpose of Indians going abroad for higher education is captured manually based either on their verbal disclosure or the type of visa of the destination country produced by them at the time of immigration clearance," Sarkar said.

According to the data provided by the ministry, the number of Indian nationals increased from 4.54 lakh in 2017 to 5.17 lakh in 2018. There was a significant increase in 2019 as well, with 5.86 lakh students flying out of the country. However, during the Covid pandemic, the number of Indian nationals in foreign varsities saw a drastic dip as only 2.59 lakh students were registered. While the number continued to remain low, it saw a slight increase in 2021 with 4.44 lakh registrations. However, the number has significantly jumped to 7.5 lakh in 2022. The increase in the number of Indian nationals abroad corresponds with the latest immigration reports from some of the popular study abroad destinations such as the US, UK, and Australia. For the UK, the Immigration Statistics Report states that 127,731 visas were granted to Indian students in September 2022, an increase of 93,470 (+273 per cent) against 34,261 in 2019. We sit in the last row, bumped about but free of stares. The bus rolls out of the dull crossroads of the city, and we are soon in the open countryside, with fields of sunflowers as far as the eye can see, their heads all facing us. Where there is no water, the land reverts to the desert. While still on level ground, we see in the distance the tall range of the Mount Bogda, abrupt like a shining prism laid horizontally on the desert surface. It is over 5,000 metres high, and the peaks are under permanent snow, in powerful contrast to the flat desert all around. Heaven lake lies part of the way up this range, about 2,000 metres above sea level, at the foot of one of the highest snow-peaks.

As the bus climbs, the sky, brilliant before, grows overcast. I have brought nothing warm to wear. It is all down at the hotel in Urumqi. Rain begins to fall. The man behind me is eating overpoweringly smelly goat's cheese. The bus window leaks inhospitably but reveals a beautiful view. We have passed quickly from the desert through arable land to pasture and the ground is now green with grass, the slopes dark with pine. A few cattle drink at a clear stream flowing past moss-covered stones; it is a Constable landscape. The stream changes into a white torrent, and as we climb higher I wish more and more that I had brought with me something warmer than the pair of shorts that have served me so well in the desert. The stream (which, we are told, rises in Heaven Lake) disappears, and we continue our slow ascent. About noon, we arrive at Heaven Lake, and look for a place to stay at the foot, which is the resort area. We get a room in a small cottage, and I am happy to note that there are thick quilts on the bed.

Standing outside the cottage, we survey our surroundings. Heaven Lake is long, sardine-shaped and fed by snowmelt from a stream at its head. The lake is an intense blue, surrounded on all sides by green mountains, beyond the delta of the inflowing stream. At the head of the lake, a capped peak which dominates the vista, is a massive snow of peaks that culminate, a little out of view, in Mount Engla itself.

For those who live in the resort, there is a small mess-hall by the shore. We eat here sometimes, and sometimes buy food from the vendors outside, who sell kababs and naan until the last buses leave. The kababs, cooked on skewers over charcoal braziers, are particularly good, and spiced and well-done. Horse's milk is available too, highly local Kazakh herdsman, but I decline this. I am so affected by the cold that Mr. Cao, the relaxed young man who runs the mess, lends me a spare pair of trousers, several sizes too large but more than comfortable. Once I am warm again, I feel a pre-dinner spurt of energy—dinner will be long in coming—and I ask him whether the lake is good for swimming in.

From January 28 to February 4, 2023, a Chinese-operated, large white high-altitude balloon was seen in North American airspace, including Alaska, western Canada, and the contiguous United States. The American and Canadian militaries asserted that the balloon was for surveillance, while the Chinese government maintained it was a civilian meteorological research airship that had been blown off course. Analysts said that the balloon's flight path and structural characteristics made it dissimilar from those which have typically been used for meteorological research. The U.S. Department of State said that the balloon was capable of locating electronic communication devices, including mobile phones and radios, and that American U-2 reconnaissance aircraft deployed to track the balloon in the air revealed that the balloon carried antennas and other equipment "clearly for intelligence surveillance and inconsistent with the equipment on board weather balloons." The State Department said that the spy balloon was part of a global Chinese military-directed surveillance effort in which Chinese spy balloons have flown over more than 40 nations in five continents.

On February 4, the U.S. Air Force shot down the balloon over U.S. territorial waters off the coast of South Carolina, on the order of U.S. President Joe Biden. Debris from the wreckage was recovered and sent to the FBI Laboratory in Quantico, Virginia, for analysis.

The incident increased U.S.-China tensions. The incident prompted U.S. Secretary of State Antony Blinken to delay a diplomatic visit to Beijing, which was set to be his first since 2018. It also further strained Canada-China relations, as Canada summoned the Chinese ambassador because of the violation of Canadian airspace. On February 3, the U.S. Department of Defense announced that a second Chinese balloon was passing over Latin America, which China also said belonged to it. On February 10, the Air Force shot down another aerial object over U.S. territory at the order of President Biden.

Amidst a maze of rocks tucked in the Aravalli mountain ranges of Haryana, a team of archaeologists discovered cave paintings they believe belong to the Upper Palaeolithic age. The cave paintings have been discovered just outside the national capital and a stone's throw away from a holy grove called Mangar Bani- the region's only surviving patch of primary forest.

While the residents of the villages have been familiar with the paintings for ages, the Haryana government's museum and archaeology department took note of them just recently.

A fact-finding team was sent to the area in the last week of June. The team came across cave paintings comprising images of human figurines, animals, foliage, and geometric drawings.

While some have faded over time, others are still very visible. They also discovered rock art and open-air ceremonial sites.

Banani Bhattacharyya, deputy director of the department of archaeology and museums informed, "So far, cave paintings in Delhi-NCR have only been found here. The paintings are yet to be dated but at least some of them belong to the Upper Palaeolithic period in all likelihood. We are viewing the paintings in continuation with the Soanian culture which has been found in Shivalik hills, Narmada and Aravallis."

Most of the cave paintings found were in ochre colour, but some were in white. As per experts, cave paintings in white are usually from a later stage (early contemporary era), while Stone Age paintings are more often than not in ochre. "Stone age paintings generally use red and ochre colours. Stones of these colours used to be available locally and inhabitants crushed the stones for preparing the colour for paintings," added Bhattacharyya.

The Upper Paleolithic Age began around 40,000 years ago and lasted till around 10,000 years ago. While yet to be established through archaeological dating, Bhattacharyya says the Mangar cave art is 20,000-40,000 years old. Bhattacharyya claimed that the discovery is extremely significant. "Starting from the Lower Palaeolithic to Middle Palaeolithic then Upper Palaeolithic, we see the evolution here. We have found significant remains from Lower Palaeolithic till Middle and Upper Palaeolithic period too," she explained. "Though tools from the Palaeolithic Age have been identified earlier in parts of the Aravallis, it is for the first time that cave paintings and rock art of a large magnitude have been found in Haryana," she added.

Wetlands are amongst the most productive ecosystems on the Earth and provide many important services to human society. They exhibit enormous diversity according to their genesis, geographical location, water regime and chemistry, dominant species, and soil and sediment characteristics. Globally, the areal extent of wetland ecosystems ranges from 917 million hectares (in ha) to more than 1275 m ha. One of the first widely used wetland classifications systems, devised by Cowardin et al., 1979, categorized wetlands into marine (coastal wetlands), estuarine (including deltas, tidal marshes, and mangrove swamps), lacustrine (lakes), riverine (along rivers and streams), and palustrine (marshes, swamps and bogs) based on their hydrological, ecological and geological characteristics.

Ramsar Convention on Wetlands was an international treaty signed in 1971. Overall, 1052 sites in Europe; 289 sites in Asia, 359 sites in Africa; 175 sites in South America; 211 sites in North America, and 79 sites in Oceania region have been identified as Ramsar sites or wetlands of international importance.

As per the Ramsar Convention definition most of the natural water bodies (such as rivers, lakes, coastal lagoons, mangroves, peat land, coral reefs) and man-made wetlands (such as ponds, farm ponds, irrigated fields, sacred groves, salt pans, reservoirs, gravel pits, sewage farms and canals) in India constitute the wetland ecosystem distributed in different geographical regions ranging from Himalayas to Deccan plateau. As of February, 2022, India has 49 Ramsar sites covering an area of 10,93,636 hectares, the highest in South Asia.

As per the estimates, India has about 757.06 thousand wetlands with a total wetland area of 15.3 m ha, accounting for nearly 4.7% of the total geographical area of the country. Out of this, areas under inland wetlands accounts for 69%, coastal wetlands 27%, and other wetlands (smaller than 2.25 ha) 4%.

Gujarat has the highest proportion (17.5%) and Mizoram has the lowest proportion (0.66%) of the area under wetlands. Among Union Territories, Lakshadweep has the highest proportion (around 96%) and Chandigarh has the least proportion (3%) of geographical area under wetlands.

As the Sun inches closer to its peak activity in its solar cycle, an explosion has been picked up behind the northern limb of the star in our solar system. Solar observatories saw bits and pieces of the explosion, which remain obscured in view from Earth's orbit.

The explosion was spotted on 31st July at around 2309 UT and Earth-orbiting satellites registered a long-lasting X3-class solar flare. "The intensity is probably an underestimate because it was partially eclipsed by the edge of the sun. NASA's Solar Dynamics Observatory (SDO) saw debris flying away from the blast site," space weather, which tracks the solar activity, reported.

While the explosion was powerful, experts have predicted that Earth is not in the line of fire from the Sun. Scientists are expected to get a view of the active region near this week as it comes to sight. Earth is not in the line of fire. The explosion is significant because it may herald an active region set to emerge over the sun's north-eastern limb later this week. A new sunspot group could bring an end to weeks of relative quiet," space weather said in its report.

Tens of thousands of people who lost their homes in a catastrophic earthquake huddled around campfires in the bitter cold and clamoured for food and water on Thursday, three days after the tremor hit Turkey and Syria and killed more than 19,300 on Monday, 6th February, 2023.

Emergency crews used pick axes, shovels and jackhammers to dig through twisted metal and concrete - and occasionally still pulled out survivors.

In the Turkish city of Antakya, dozens scrambled for aid in front of a truck distributing children's coats and other supplies. Many of those who lost their homes found shelter in tents, stadiums and other temporary accommodation, but others slept outdoors.

In Antakya, over 100 bodies were awaiting identification in a makeshift morgue outside a hospital.

Authorities called off search-and-rescue operations in the cities of Kilis and Sanliurfa, where destruction was not as severe as in other impacted regions.

The U.N. is authorised to deliver aid through only one border crossing, and road damage has prevented that thus far. U.N. Officials pleaded for humanitarian concerns to take precedence over wartime politics.

The scale of loss and suffering remained massive. Turkish authorities said on Thursday that the death toll had risen to more than 16,100 in the country, with more than 64,000 injured. In Syria, which includes government-held and rebel-held areas, more than 3,100 have been reported dead and more than 5,000 injured.

Rescue teams urged quiet in the hope of hearing stifled pleas for help, and the Syrian paramedic group known as the White Helmets noted that every second could mean saving a life. But more and more often, the teams pulled out dead bodies.

It was not clear how many people were still unaccounted for in both countries.

Turkey's disaster-management agency said more than 110,000 rescue personnel were now taking part in the effort and more than 5,500 vehicles, including tractors, cranes, bulldozers and excavators had been shipped.

The Foreign Ministry said 95 countries have offered help. More than half of that number have sent a total of nearly 6,500 rescuers. Another 2,400 more are still expected to arrive. International aid for Syria was far more sparse.

Efforts there have been hampered by the civil war and the isolation of the rebel held region along the border that is surrounded by Russia backed government forces.

- (4) Because the roads have been damaged there

An earthquake is what happens when two blocks of the earth suddenly slip past one another. The surface where they slip is called the fault or fault plane. The location below the earth's surface where the earthquake starts is called the hypocenter, and the location directly above it on the surface of the earth is called the epicenter.

Sometimes an earthquake has foreshocks. These are smaller earthquakes that happen in the same place as the larger earthquake that follows. Scientists can't tell that an earthquake is a foreshock until the larger earthquake happens. The largest, main earthquake is called the mainshock. Mainshocks always have aftershocks that follow. These are smaller earthquakes that occur afterwards in the same place as the mainshock. Depending on the size of the mainshock, aftershocks can continue for weeks, months, and even years after the mainshock! The earth has four major layers: the inner core, outer core, mantle and crust. The crust and the top of the mantle make up a thin skin on the surface of our planet.

But this skin is not all in one piece - it is made up of many pieces like a puzzle covering the surface of the earth. Not only that, but these puzzle pieces keep slowly moving around, sliding past one another and bumping into each other. We call these puzzle pieces tectonic plates, and the edges of the plates are called the plate boundaries. The plate boundaries are made up of many faults, and most of the earthquakes around the world occur on these faults. Since the edges of the plates are rough, they get stuck while the rest of the plate keeps moving. Finally, when the plate has moved far enough, the edges unstuck on one of the faults and there is an earthquake.

In the years leading up to the Russian Revolution of 1917, the country had a succession of wars. These were, The Crimean War, The Russo-Turkish War, The Russo-Japanese War and The World War I. All of these required a lot from the state, including tax dollars and manpower. Russia suffered defeat in all, except against Turkey. This series of war caused great discontent among the people and caused suffering in the country's economy and government.

Along with these wars, there were three major parties that contributed to the cause of the revolution. First, there were the peasants, who maintained the majority of the population in Russia. They were excessively poor and could barely escape famine from harvest to harvest. The population boom in Russia from 1867-1896 was felt most drastically by the peasants. The increase of 30 million people in less than 30 years was too great that the land to the peasants' disposal did not increase sufficiently. The government tried to help, but war took precedence. Second, there was a rise of the industrial working class. These workers were employed in the mines, factories and workshops of the major cities. They suffered low wages, poor housing and many accidents. Again, the government tried to help by passing factory acts to restrict the number of hours one could work. However, their efforts were at too small a scale to have any real effect. As a result, there were many strikes and constant conflicts between the workers and the police. Lastly, the tsar of Russia was the cause of much disapproval. Tsar Nicholas II was much more interested in his family life, than matters of the state. He had an obsession with retaining all his privileges and the belief that he was chosen by God to rule. Also, he didn't understand the forces of industrialization and nationalism that were growing throughout Russia. His disregard for the struggles of the people led them to lose faith in him and the long-standing tradition of autocracy. The people were not content and were ready to revolt. They just needed a good reason and a strong leader.

- (1) Orders
- (2) Sequences
- (3) Disruptions
- (4) Successions

Key factors influencing subway air pollution will include station depth, date of construction, type of ventilation (natural/air conditioning), types of brakes (electromagnetic or conventional brake pads) and wheels (rubber or steel) used on the trains, train frequency and more recently the presence or absence of platform screen-door systems.

In particular, much subway particulate matter is sourced from moving train parts such as wheels and brake pads, as well as from the steel rails and power-supply materials, making the particles dominantly iron-containing.

To date, there is no clear epidemiological indication of abnormal health effects on underground workers and commuters. New York subway workers have been exposed to such air without significant observed impacts on their health, and no increased risk of lung cancer was found among subway train drivers in the Stockholm subway system.

But a note of caution is struck by the observations of scholars who found that employees working on the platforms of Stockholm underground, where PM concentrations were greatest, tended to have higher levels of risk markers for cardiovascular disease than ticket sellers and train drivers.

The dominantly ferrous particles are mixed with particles from a range of other sources, including rock ballast from the track, biological aerosols such as bacteria and viruses, and air from the outdoors, and driven through the tunnel system on turbulent air currents generated by the trains themselves and ventilation systems.

709. Inferring from passage, what is the most practical way of reducing the health risk of subway life?

Another feature of the post-Cold War era is that since the West has become the victor of the East-West ideological rivalry, Western systems and Western influences, in general, started to dominate the whole world. For example, the United States has visibly enhanced its influence in the Middle East and in Caucasus since the end of the Cold War. The East and in Kuwait by Iraq in August 1990 and the following Gulf Crisis, in a way, created an opportunity for the United States to exercise its hegemonic power in the Middle East. In the following years, in the absence of a counter-power, the influence of the United States increased further. With the military operation to Afghanistan and invasion of Iraq after the September 11, 2001 attacks, the United States perpetuated its dominance in the region. The region of Caucasus was formerly under the Russian sphere of influence. But the United States managed to enter this energy-rich region with some new allies, used to be the part of the Soviet Union, such as Azerbaijan, Ukraine, and Georgia. Although Russia certainly did not want the United States presence in the region, its ability to prevent it has remained limited. Likewise, NATO expanded to involve Eastern Europe, a region also used to be under Soviet influence. Russia, in the beginning, tried to resist NATO expansion, posing several threats, including creating a counter defense organization. Wildlife and nature have largely been associated with humans for numerous emotional and social reasons. A simple stroll around the park amidst some birds provides a fresh breath of life and charges our batteries. Apart from a bird feeder in the backyard, we can also take up other active pastimes, such as hiking, hunting, canoeing or wildlife photography to relieve our parched nerves. Since prehistoric times, animals have been highly useful to us in providing food, clothing and source of income.

Studies indicate that woodpeckers are capable of destroying 90% of codling moth larvae residing under the bark of trees. This shows the significance of wildlife and wildlife habitat for preserving genetic diversity. Hence, places where agriculture, for ests, and fisheries depend on crops or stocks can ensure that such living resources are enough to withstand the ever-increasing list of threats. Further, in medicine, development of new drugs and treatments are largely dependent on wildlife and wildlife habitat. Interestingly, most pharmaceutical products are a result of discovering or developing wildlife species and not discoveries through the traditional chemistry principles. Today, most medicinal remedies contain at least one ingredient derived from a wild plant or animal.

Biodiversity is the different variety of living beings within an ecosystem or in our planet. It is a measurement on the health of ecosystems. Biodiversity also take part in the function of climate. In terrestrial habitats, tropical areas are rich in species whereas polar areas support lesser species. The conservation of biodiversity is inevitable for the survival of men.

One of the greatest sailing adventures of the past 25 years was the conquest of the Northwest Passage, powered by sail, human muscle, and determination. In 100 days, over three summers (1986-88), Canadians Jeff MacInnis and Mike Beedell accomplished the first wind-powered crossing of the Northwest Passage.

In Jeff MacInnis's words..... Our third season. We weave our way through the labyrinth of ice, and in the distance we hear an unmistakable sound. A mighty bowhead whale is nearby, and its rhythmic breaths fill us with awe. Finally, we see it relaxed on the surface, its blowhole quivering like a volcanic cone, but it senses our presence and quickly sounds. We are very disappointed. We had only good intentions—to revel in its beautiful immensity and to feel its power. Mike thinks how foolish it would be for this mighty beast to put any faith in us. After all, we are members of the species that had almost sent the bowhead into extinction with our greed for whale oil and bone. It is estimated that as many as 38,000 bowheads were killed off eastern Baffin Island in the 1800s; today there are only about 200 left.

The fascinating and sometimes terrifying wildlife keeps us entertained during our explorations. Bearded harp and ring seals greet us daily. The profusion of bird life is awesome, at times we see and smell hundreds of thousands of thick billed murres clinging to their cliffside nests. Our charts show that we are on the edge of a huge shoal where the frigid ocean currents upwell and mix nutrients that provide a feast for the food chain. At times, these animals scare the living daylights out of us. They have a knack of sneaking up behind us and then shooting out of the water and belly flopping for maximum noise and splash. A horrendous splash coming from behind has a heart-stopping effect in polar bear country.

We have many encounters with the 'Lords of the Arctic', but we are always cautious, observant, and ever so respectful that we are in their domain. In some regions the land is totally devoid of life, while in others the pulse of life takes our breath away. Such is the paradox of the Arctic: its wastelands flow into oases that are found nowhere else on the face of the earth. Many times we find ancient signs of Inuit people who lived here, superbly attuned to the land. We feel great respect for them; this landscape is a challenge at every moment.

Coronations have remained much the same for more than 1,000 years. The British ceremony is the only remaining event of its type in Europe.

However, Buckingham Palace has said that although the coronation will be "rooted in longstanding traditions", it will also "reflect the monarch's role today and look towards the future".

It is likely to be shorter and smaller in scale than Queen Elizabeth II's 1953 coronation, with a wider range of religions represented.

The coronation procession is also expected to be more modest. Queen Elizabeth's procession had 16,000 participants, and took 45 minutes to pass any stationary point on the 7km (4.3 miles) route.

This time the King and Queen Consort will travel to Westminster Abbey in the King's procession, and return to Buckingham Palace in a larger coronation procession, where they will be joined by other members of the Royal Family.

There are several stages to the service:

The recognition: While standing beside the Coronation Chair, the monarch is presented to those gathered in the

by the Archbishop of Canterbury. The congregation sings "God Save the King!", and trumpets sound.

The oath: The sovereign swears to uphold the law and the Church of England

The anointing: The King's ceremonial robe is removed and he sits in the Coronation Chair. A gold cloth is held over the chair to conceal the King from view. The Archbishop of Canterbury anoints the King's hands, breast and back with holy oil made to a secret recipe but known to the monarch. The oil is made from ambergis, orange flowers, roses, jasmine and cinnamon.

The investiture: The sovereign is presented with items including the Royal Orb, representing religious and moral authority, the Sceptre, representing power; and the Sovereign's Sceptre, a rod of gold topped with a white enamel dove, a symbol of justice and mercy. Finally, the Archbishop places St Edward's Crown on the King's head.

The enthronement and homage: The King leaves the Coronation Chair and moves to the throne. Peers kneel before the monarch to pay homage

The Queen Consort will then be anointed in the same way and crowned.

India's telecom regulator has directed service providers to take corrective measures to improve call quality on an urgent basis and introduce internal quality of service (QoS) monitoring for 5G on a full scale, all-day basis. The directives were issued after the regulator met representatives from Bharti Airtel, Vodafone Idea and Reliance Jio on Friday. "Authority has directed TSPs (telecom service providers) to take urgent steps to demonstrate visible improvement in quality of service and quality of experience by consumers. TSPs were asked to analyse the issue of call muting and one way speech and take corrective action on priority."

While rolling out 5G network, TSPs should ensure that there is least disturbance or poor quality of service of existing telecom services." TRAI secretary V. Raghunandan said in a statement issued after the meeting with the telecom service providers. The regulator also asked Telcos to plan and implement systems for online data collection for QoS benchmarks and their processing to generate performance reports with licence service area, state level or lower granularity. This will simplify the process of QoS performance reporting by Telcos and reduce the compliance burden. India has been geographically split into 22 licence service areas. Raghunandan said the regulator was closely monitoring the incidences of long duration network outages, that adversely affect the quality of services and consumer experience and asked carriers to report such outages to TRAI in any district or state. Striking the largest ever deal by one airline took months of secret talks carried out a stone's throw from Britain's Buckingham palace and culminating in a celebration over coastal Indian curries, according to people involved in the talks.

Air India's record aircraft deal has put the Tata Group-owned airline in the league of aspiring global carriers. On Tuesday, it provisionally agreed to acquire almost 500 jets from Airbus and Boeing to take on domestic and international rivals.

The deal was in the making for over a year, insiders said. Serious talks began last summer and continued until days before Christmas when outlines were agreed. As the astonishing scale of the deal began to crystallise, Reuters reported in December the parties were nearing a record 500-plane agreement.

The epicentre of deal making was St James' Court - a luxury Victorian hotel near Buckingham Palace in London's West End.

In the hothouse atmosphere of a classic aircraft industry negotiating ritual known as a 'bakeoff', negotiators from the airline, plane-makers and engine-giants camped out at the Tata-owned hotel and neighbouring suites for days at a stretch.

NEW DELHI: A new app developed by the external affairs ministry and rolled out in New Delhi is expected to cut the time for police verification of passport applicants to five days and reduce the scope for misuse of the process, people familiar with the matter said on Friday.

The 'mPassport Police App', developed by the consular, passport and visa division of the external affairs ministry for law enforcement agencies, is being rolled out along with 350 tablets to personnel of the Special Branch of Delhi Police. These personnel are responsible for carrying out verification of antecedents of passport applicants.

Police verification continues to be one of the most time-consuming processes in applying for a passport and the new app is expected to cut the time taken for this - 15 days - by two-thirds, the people cited above said. This process is also linked to a number of complaints about its misuse and the app will help tackle this issue by ensuring greater transparency, the people said.

Abhishek Dubey, the regional passport officer (RPO) for Delhi, said in a statement: "Police verification is an integral part of passport issuance system. Various steps have been taken to streamline and expedite the process. To further expedite the process, the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) introduced 'mPassport Police App'."

The people said GPS and geo-tagging while using the tablets will establish whether police officials actually visited the applicant's home for verification. China and India together will account for more than a third of the estimated global population, which is expected to hit 8.045 billion by mid-year, according to the United Nations Population Fund's (UNFPA) 'State of World Population Report' for 2023. But, contrary to public perception, population growth has been slowing in both countries - particularly in China, which recorded a population decline for the first time in six decades last year.

China's population fell in 2022 to 1.411 billion, down from 850,000 people from the previous year, according to the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS). The birth rate fell to a record low of 6.77 births per 1,000 people, down from 7.52 a year earlier and the lowest level since the founding of Communist China in 1949.

Along with the flagging population data, China also recorded one of its worst economic growth numbers in nearly a century last year, underscoring the steep challenges the country faces as its labor force shrinks and the ranks of the retired swell.

India's working-age population stands at more than 900 million, according to 2021 data from the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. King Sagara, an ancestor of King Bhagiratha, once conducted an ashwamedha yagna to extend his dominion. When the horse went astray, the king sent his 60,000 sons to find the horse. Unfortunately, in the course of the quest, they ended up disrupting the intense meditation of sage Kapila, at whose abode they found the horse. Kapila burnt them all to ashes, sending them all to the netherworld—an act he instantly regretted when he realised what had happened. After breaking the news to King Sagara, he mentioned that the souls of King Sagara's sons could attain salvation only if the heavenly Ganga could be persuaded to flow over their ashes.

It was Bhagiratha, whose austere penance and devotion pleased Lord Shiva so much so that he persuaded Ganga to descend to the earth. Ganga consented, but the problem arose that the earth would probably be unable to bear the intensity of Ganga's flow and even be shattered in the process. Thus, a solution was devised: Ganga would first land on Shiva's head and the locks of his hair would minimise the impact. Still, the force of Ganga's landing was such that it split into seven tributaries, three of which flowed east and three of them west. The seventh stream followed King Bhagiratha to the place where his ancestor's ashes lay. The river's waters instantly purified them. This is also the origin of the belief that the Ganga's waters can purify mortal souls of all their sins.

We started our research into organisational and personal excellence by studying a slightly different topic. We figured that if we could learn why certain people were more effective than others, then we could learn exactly what they did, clone it and pass it on to others. We asked people to identify who they thought were their most effective colleagues. In fact, over the past twenty-five years, we have asked over twenty thousand people to identify the individuals in their organisations who could really get things done. Throughout history, the intricacies of the human mind have been the subject of fascination and inquiry. From ancient philosophers to modern-day neuroscientists, the workings of the brain have been studied and analysed in an attempt to unravel its mysteries. However, despite centuries of research, much remains unknown about the complexities of human cognition and consciousness.

One of the most fascinating aspects of the human mind is its ability to create and imagine. The human mind has the capacity to conceptualise and bring into being ideas that were previously unknown or unimaginable, from artistic expression to scientific discovery. The process of creativity has captured the attention of scholars and laypeople alike and is both enigmatic and awe-inspiring.

There have been many theories proposed to explain the process of creativity. Some suggest that it is a purely subconscious process, while others argue that creativity is a result of conscious effort and intentional problem-solving. Still others suggest that creativity arises from a combination of conscious and subconscious processes.

Despite the ongoing debate over the nature of creativity, one thing is clear: it is a multifaceted and complex phenomenon. Creativity can manifest in a wide range of human activities, from the creation of art and literature to the development of scientific theories and inventions. It can occur in both individual and collective contexts and can be driven by a variety of factors such as curiosity, passion, or the desire for recognition.

Creativity also has the potential to bring about positive change in the world. Throughout history, creative individuals and groups have used their talents to address social, political, and environmental challenges, often inspiring others to take action and make a difference. From the abolitionist movement to the civil rights movement to the environmental movement, creativity has played a crucial role in promoting social justice and positive change.

Despite the many benefits of creativity, it is not without its challenges. The process of creative expression can be fraught with obstacles, from self-doubt and insecurity to external pressures and constraints. Moreover, not all creative ideas are successful or well-received, and many artists and innovators face rejection and criticism as they seek to bring their ideas to fruition. Despite these challenges, however, the human drive to create and imagine persists.

Individuals and groups continue to harness the power of creativity to make a difference in the world. From the humblest amateur artist to the most celebrated innovator, the human capacity for creativity remains one of our greatest strengths and sources of inspiration.

Sustainable utensils are proving to be a crucial tool in our collective efforts towards building a greener and more environmentally conscious world. These utensils, often made from renewable resources such as bamboo or plant-based materials like cornstarch, offer a myriad of benefits. Firstly, sustainable utensils significantly reduce our reliance on single-use plastics. Plastic cutlery, traditionally used for convenience, contributes to the vast amounts of waste that end up in landfills and oceans, polluting ecosystems and harming marine life. By switching to sustainable alternatives, we can minimise this environmental damage. Secondly, sustainable utensils are biodegradable or compostable, meaning they can break down naturally over time. This ensures that even if they do end up in landfills, they won't persist for centuries like plastic does. Instead, they return to the Earth without leaving a lasting negative impact. These utensils can be reused multiple times, further reducing waste. Many sustainable options are durable and washable, making them a viable long-term solution.

Cybercrime refers to any illegal activity that involves the use of technology or computer networks. As technology continues to advance and more people depend on it for their daily lives, the threat of cybercrime becomes more prevalent. Cybercriminals can carry out various types of attacks, including hacking, phishing, ransomware attacks and identity theft.

One of the most common forms of cybercrime is hacking, where a cybercriminal gains unauthorised access to a computer system or network. This type of attack can be particularly devastating, as it can give the hacker access to sensitive information such as financial data, personal information or intellectual property. Cybercriminals can also use malware to infiltrate systems, steal information or cause damage to the network.

Phishing is another common form of cybercrime that involves tricking people into providing personal information or login credentials. Cybercriminals will often create fake websites or emails that look legitimate to convince users to give up their information. These attacks can be very effective because they often target people's trust in legitimate businesses or institutions.

Ransomware attacks have become increasingly prevalent in recent years, where cybercriminals use malware to lock a victim's computer or files until a ransom is paid. This type of attack can be particularly damaging for businesses, as it can result in lost revenue, damage to reputation and a disruption in operations.

Identity theft is another major form of cybercrime, where cybercriminals steal someone's personal information to access financial accounts, apply for credit or commit other crimes in their name. This can be particularly damaging for individuals, as it can take months or even years to fully recover from the damage.

Cybercrime is a global problem that affects individuals, businesses and governments alike. It can cause significant financial losses, damage to reputation and disruptions to daily life. To combat cybercrime, individuals and organisations must take proactive measures to protect themselves, including using strong passwords, keeping software up to date and being cautious when opening emails or clicking links.

Governments and law enforcement agencies also have a role to play in combatting cybercrime. They can work to strengthen cybersecurity laws, increase funding for cybersecurity initiatives and collaborate with international partners to investigate and prosecute cybercriminals.

Overall, cybercrime is a complex and ever-evolving problem requiring a multi-faceted approach. By taking proactive measures and working together, we can reduce the threat of cybercrime and protect ourselves and our communities from its damaging effects.

Remote work, the ability to work from home or other locations outside of the traditional office setting, has become increasingly popular in recent years. With the development of new technologies, remote work is now possible for many jobs that previously required employees to be physically present in the office. This shift towards remote work has been driven by a number of factors, including the desire for increased flexibility, reduced overhead costs and improved work-life balance.

One of the primary benefits of remote work is the flexibility it provides. Employees are able to work from wherever they choose, whether that be from the comfort of their own homes, a local coffee shop or even while travelling. This flexibility can allow employees to better balance work and personal responsibilities and can result in higher job satisfaction and retention rates. Employers also benefit from increased flexibility, as remote work can lead to reduced overhead costs, such as rent and utilities for office space.

In addition to flexibility, remote work has also been linked to increased productivity. Many studies have shown that employees who work from home are often more productive than those who work in a traditional office setting, due in part to reduced distractions and interruptions. As well as the ability to work during one's most productive hours, rather than adhering to a traditional 9-to-5 schedule. Furthermore, remote work can lead to a more diverse and inclusive workforce, as individuals with disabilities or caregiving responsibilities can more easily participate in the workforce.

Despite the benefits, there are also some drawbacks to consider when it comes to remote work. One of the primary concerns is the lack of social interaction and collaboration. When employees are working remotely, they may miss out on the benefits of in-person collaboration, such as brainstorming sessions and the ability to bounce ideas off of colleagues. Additionally, remote work can lead to feelings of isolation and loneliness, which can have a negative impact on mental health and job satisfaction.

Another potential drawback of remote work is the potential for blurred boundaries between work and personal time. When employees work from home, it can be difficult to separate work time from personal time, leading to longer work hours and decreased work-life balance. Additionally, the structure of a traditional office environment, which can be easy for employees to become distracted or procrastinate, leading to decreased productivity. Overall, while remote work offers many benefits, it is important for both employees and employers to consider the potential drawbacks and take steps to mitigate them. This may include finding ways to maintain social interaction and collaboration, setting clear boundaries between work and personal time and establishing a structured routine to ensure productivity and work-life balance. As remote work continues to become more prevalent, it is important to balance its benefits with its potential challenges and find ways to create a productive and healthy remote work environment.

- (1) It leads to increased productivity.
- (2) It allows individuals with disabilities to participate in the workforce.

784. Which of the following is a reason why remote workers are often more productive than those who work in a traditional office setting, according to the passage?

- (1) Remote workers have fewer distractions and interruptions.
- (2) Remote workers have access to better technology and equipment.
- (3) Remote workers have more opportunities for in-person collaboration.
- (4) Remote workers are given more autonomy and control over their work.

785. Which of the following statements best represents a real-world example of 'blurred boundaries' in remote work as described in the passage?

- (1) A worker who is required to come into the office every day but also frequently works from home due to personal reasons, resulting in reduced social interaction with co-workers.
- (2) A worker who is easily distracted by personal responsibilities and household chores during their remote work hours, leading to decreased productivity and missed deadlines.
- (3) An employee who sets up a dedicated workspace in their home and follows a structured work schedule to maintain a healthy work-life balance.
- (4) An employee who works from home occasionally responds to work emails after their normal working hours, leading to burnout and decreased productivity.

When I first moved to the city, I was taken aback by the pace of life. Everything was always moving, always in a rush. Cars honked their horns, people pushed and shoved their way through the crowds, and the noise was constant. At first, I found it exhilarating. I felt like I was part of something bigger than myself. But as the weeks turned into months, I began to feel overwhelmed.

I noticed that I was becoming increasingly anxious. I was having trouble sleeping, and my thoughts were constantly racing. I knew that I needed to do something to slow down and find some peace. That's when I discovered meditation.

At first, I was sceptical. I had always thought of meditation as something only hippies and yogis did. But I was desperate, so I gave it a try. I found a quiet place in my apartment, sat down cross-legged, and closed my eyes. At first, my mind was still racing, but I focused on my breath and tried to let go of my thoughts. Slowly, I felt my body relax, and my mind grew calmer.

Over the next few weeks, I began to notice the effects of my meditation practice. I felt less anxious and more centred. I was able to sleep better, and I felt more focused during the day. I started to see the world around me with new eyes. The noise and chaos of the city no longer bothered me as much. I felt more in control of my thoughts and emotions.

As I continued to meditate, I started to make other changes in my life. I started to eat healthier, exercise more, and spend more time outside. I found that these small changes had a big impact on my overall sense of well-being. I realised that the frenzied pace of city life had been taking a toll on me, and that I needed to take better care of myself.

Looking back, I can see how my decision to start meditating had a ripple effect on my life. It was the catalyst for a series of changes that have made me a happier and healthier person. I'm still amazed at how something as simple as sitting down and closing my eyes for a few minutes each day could have such a profound impact.

In conclusion, the fast-paced life of the city had a negative effect on my mental and physical health. But by taking the time to meditate and make other positive changes, I was able to improve my overall well-being. I encourage anyone feeling overwhelmed or stressed to give meditation a try. You never know how it might change your life.

On woody plants known as vines, luscious, smooth-skinned berries called grapes grow in dense clusters. In particular, grapes are grown in France, Italy, Spain, Australia, Chile, Romania, Georgia, South Africa and California, all of which have warm summers and moderate winters. Table grapes are larger and sweeter grapes that are intended for fresh consumption. To create wine, 80% of the grapes are crushed. The fermentation process turns grapes into wine. My path to the house was by no means an easy one. After confused wanderings through tangled hedges, struggling with obstacles that looked strange to me in the surrounding gloom, I arrived in front of a long, low building. There, to my astonishment, I found doors and windows open to the pervading mist, except for one square window through which a light shone from a row of candles on a long mahogany table.

The quiet and apparent emptiness of this odd and picturesque building made me pause. I am not much affected by the appearance of things, but this silent place, with its sinister atmosphere, made me feel uneasy. I was about to reconsider and go back to the road, when a second look at the comfortable interior I was leaving, convinced me that I was being foolish and sent me straight back to the door which stood open so invitingly.

But half-way up the path, my progress was halted by the sight of a man coming out of the house that I had wrongly assumed to be empty. He seemed to be in a hurry and, at the moment when I first saw him, was busy putting his watch back in his pocket. He did not shut the door behind him, which I thought odd, especially as he had been looking behind him. He seemed to take in all the details of the place he was so hurriedly leaving.

As we met, he raised his hat. This also struck me as unusual, for he displayed more respect than that usually shown to strangers. I was further puzzled that he showed little surprise at bumping into another person in these remote, misty surroundings. Indeed, he was so little impressed by my being there that he nearly passed me without a word or any other hint of greeting, except the raising of his hat. But this did not satisfy me. I was hungry, cold, and eager for creature comforts, and the house before me offered not only warmth, but gave out an inviting smell of food being cooked which was difficult to ignore.

Academics has always been an essential part of human development. It prepares us to survive in the outside world and establish an identity of our own. In India, from an early age we have been taught that education is limited to the boundaries of academics only; the idea of getting out into the field, for gaining practical experience is always considered a hoax. This has hindered students' development.

In the 21st century, the pure academic type of education is slowly paving way for a whole new type. The shift in the whole education system is evident. People have now come to understand that education should focus on students' overall development, rather than restricting him/her to the classroom.

Co-curricular activities that take place outside the classroom help in the growth of the child, in more than one way. Participating in such activities helps youngsters grow mentally, socially and individually. Intellectual development of a student takes place in the classroom, but for the aesthetic development such as team-building, character-building and physical growth, students must step out into the outside world.

Similarly, in colleges and institutions, there is a need for practical exposure so that the students can experience the actual working of an industry. Most professional colleges including B-schools, have started providing practical exposure to students through regular guest lectures, industrial visits, conferences and so on. Guest lectures are very important for all-round development of students as guest speakers talk about their real-life experiences and not what is there in the text books.

Through such events students are made to participate and coordinate different events wherein, they get to know how exactly things are managed. Classroom teaching provides the foundation, and co-curricular or extra-curricular activities provide practical exposure and opportunities to implement what students learn in the classroom. This helps in developing the overall personality of the students, including various soft-skills in them, which otherwise are difficult to teach.

809. Select the correct meaning of 'implement' as used in the passage.

- (1) inculcate

- (1) Preparing students for survival in the real world
- (2) Importance of teaching soft skills to students
- (3) The need to change the education system in 21st century
- (4) Participation of students in extra-curricular activities

812. What has hindered the development of students?

- (1) expanding academics to the outside world
- (2) getting out into the field
- (3) not gaining practical experience
- (4) indulging in co-curricular activities

813. Which of these does NOT provide industry exposure to students of business schools?

In the pre-dawn tranquillity of the Andaman Sea, a seismic tremor struck, momentarily agitating the ocean's placid surface. The Andaman and Nicobar Islands, an archipelago in the Bay of Bengal, felt the earth beneath them shudder at 5:50 a.m. on Friday. According to the National Centre for Seismology (NCS), a 4.2 magnitude earthquake occurred at a depth of 10km, its epicentre originating from a seismically active region beneath the sea. No casualties or damages have been reported.

Earthquakes, like the one experienced in the Andaman Sea, are stark reminders of the Earth's ever-shifting tectonic plates. These seismic events result from the sudden release of energy in the Earth's crust, creating seismic waves that cause the ground to shake. The intensity and impact of an earthquake depends on various factors, including its magnitude, depth, and proximity to populated areas. The Andaman and Nicobar Islands are located in a region where several tectonic plates converge, including the Indian Plate, the Burma Plate, and the Sunda Plate. The interaction of these plates leads to frequent earthquakes and volcanic activity. With its 4.2 magnitude, the recent earthquake is considered moderate, but its occurrence in a seismically active region serves as a reminder of the unpredictable and potentially devastating nature of such events.

The NCS, the nodal agency of the Government of India responsible for monitoring earthquake activity in the country, is using a network of seismographs to provide accurate and analyses data from seismic events to provide accurate information to the public and relevant authorities.

This data helps scientists understand patterns and trends, leading to a better understanding of earthquake behaviour and potential risks. Earlier this week, Maharashtra's Satara district was also shaken by a 3.3 magnitude earthquake. While these events seem isolated, they form part of a broader pattern of seismic activity across the region.

The Andaman and Nicobar Islands have experienced several significant earthquakes in the past, including a 5.8 magnitude earthquake in 2021. The potential consequences of such earthquakes can be devastating, causing loss of life and extensive damage to infrastructure. It is therefore vital to have effective early warning systems and disaster management strategies in place.

While the 4.2 magnitude earthquake in the Andaman Sea did not result in any casualties or damages, it underscores the importance of continued investment in earthquake preparedness and resilience measures, particularly in seismically active regions like the Andaman and Nicobar Islands.

The regal period (753-509 BC) and the early republic (509-280 BC) are the most poorly documented periods of Roman history because historical accounts of Rome were not written until much later. Greek historians did not take serious notice of Rome until the Pyrrhic War (280-275 BC), when Rome was completing its conquest of Italy and was fighting against the Greek city of Tarentum in southern Italy. Rome's first native historian, a senator named Quintus Fabius Pictor, lived and wrote even later, during the Second Punic War (218-201 BC). Thus historical writing at Rome did not begin until after Rome had completed its conquest of Italy, had emerged as a major power of the ancient world, and was engaged in a titanic struggle with Carthage for control of the western Mediterranean. Fabius Pictor's history, which began with the city's mythical Trojan ancestry and narrated events up to his own day, established the form of subsequent histories of Rome. During the last 200 years BC, 16 other Romans wrote similarly inclusive narratives. All these works are now collectively termed 'the Roman annalistic tradition' because many of them attempted to give a year-by-year (or annalistic) account of Roman affairs for the republic.

Although none of these histories are fully preserved, the first 10 books of Livy, one of Rome's greatest historians, are extant and cover Roman affairs from earliest times to the year 293 BC (extant are also Books 21 to 45 treating the events from 218 BC to 167 BC). Since Livy wrote during the reign of the emperor Augustus (27 BC-AD 14), he was separated by 200 years from Fabius Pictor, who, in turn, had lived long after many of the events his history described.

Thus, in writing about early Rome, ancient historians were confronted with great difficulties in ascertaining the truth. They possessed a list of annual magistrates from the beginning of the republic onward (the consular fasti), which formed the chronological framework of their accounts. Religious records and the texts of some laws and treaties provided a bare outline of major events. Ancient historians fleshed out this meagre factual material with both native and Greek folklore. Consequently, over time, historical facts about early Rome often suffered from patriotic or face-saving reinterpretations involving exaggeration of the truth, suppression of embarrassing facts, and invention.

819. What did the early Roman historians use to fill up details in the historical accounts of events?

A fact that draws our attention is that, according to his position in life, an extravagant man is either admired or loathed. A successful business man does nothing to increase his popularity by being prudent with his money. A person who is wealthy is expected to lead a luxurious life and to be lavish with his hospitality. If he is not so, he is considered mean, and his reputation in business may even suffer in consequence. The paradox remains that he had not been careful with his money in the first place; he would never have achieved his present wealth.

Among the low income group, a different set of values exists. The young clerk, who makes his wife a present of a new dress when he has not paid his house rent, is condemned as extravagant. Carefulness with money to the point of meanness is applauded as a virtue.

Nothing in his life is considered more worthy than paying his bills. The ideal wife for such a man separates her housekeeping money into joyless little piles - so much for rent, for food, for the children's shoes, she is able to face the milkman with equanimity every month, satisfied with her economizing ways, and never knows the guilt of buying something she can't really afford.

As for myself, I fall neither of these categories. If I have money to spare I can be extravagant, but when, as is usually the case, I am hard up and then I am the meanest man imaginable.

- (5) The rich amass wealth by spending money economically.

826. The word 'equanimity' in the passage means
- (1) tranquillity
 - (2) frustration
 - (3) anxiety
 - (4) agitation

827. If a successful businessman is judicious with his money
- (1) his business flourishes
 - (2) his reputation suffers
 - (3) his popularity rises
 - (4) his prestige improves

828. Which of these can be inferred from the passage?

Ancient Greece, ancient Egypt, ancient India - all of them may have had great civilizations whose architecture, art, and literature are objects of admiration. But they are not nations. To realize this truth, you will have to forget for the time being the history you were taught at school. Because it is that history, drilled into your heads from the time you were children, and constantly renewed by national festivals and ceremonies, the speeches of your leaders, and novels, films, and television serials that make it seem obvious to you that your nation is ancient. New media is a catch-all term used for various kinds of electronic communications that are conceivable due to innovation in computer technology. In contrast to 'old' media, which includes newspapers, magazines, books, television and other such non-interactive media, new media comprises websites, online video/audio streams, emails, online social platforms, online communities, online forums, blogs, internet telephony, web advertisements, online education and much more. It is not very easy to draw a line between the new and old media because the so-called old media has found new ways of representation in digital forms, leaving behind its conventional methods of representation. New media is considered to be the multimedia and digital form of communication happening via desktop and laptop computers as well as phones, tablets and other devices. The story of Joanne Kathleen Rowling's near magical rise to fame is almost as well known as the characters she creates.

Rowling was constantly writing and telling stories to her younger sister Dianne. "The first story I ever wrote down was about a rabbit called Rabbit." Rowling said in an interview. "He got the measles and was visited by his friends including a giant bee called Miss Bee."

And ever since Rabbit and Miss Bee, I have always wanted to be a writer, though I rarely told anyone so.

However, my parents, both of whom come from impoverished backgrounds and neither of whom had been to college, took the view that my overactive imagination was an amusing personal quirk that would never pay a mortgage or secure a pension.

A writer from the age of six, with two unpublished novels in the drawer, she was stuck on a train when Harry walked into her mind fully formed. She spent the next five years constructing the plots of seven books, one for every year of his secondary school life.

Rowling says she started writing the first book, Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone, in Portugal, where she was teaching English.

At first nobody wanted to publish Harry Potter. She was told that the plot was too complex. Refusing to compromise, she found a publisher.

In 1997, Rowling received her first royalty cheque. By book three, she had skyrocketed to the top of the publishing world. A row of zeros appeared on the author's bank balance and her life was turned upside down. Day and night she had journalists knocking on the unanswered door of her flat.

Rowling's quality control has become legendary, as is her obsession with accuracy. She's thrilled with Stephen Fry's taped version of the books and outraged that an Italian dust jacket showed Harry minus his glasses. "Don't they understand that the glasses are the clue to his vulnerability?"

Lena was an avid explorer. She had a deep fascination for the mysteries hidden within the dense forests. One day, while wandering through a secluded forest, she stumbled upon an ancient-looking map half-buried in the undergrowth. The map depicted a trail that led to a legendary waterfall rumoured to possess magical properties. Driven by her curiosity, Lena decided to follow the trail.

As a result of increasing population and expansion of residential areas, forest lands are being encroached. This is not all; even the wildlife is under extreme threat. As our fauna is facing a dearth of adequate shelter in forests, they are heading towards towns and hence get killed by hunters. Consequently, many animal species have either become extinct or are on the verge of extinction. The Black Buck is almost endangered and found only in two countries, Nepal and India. In India, this antelope is found in many national parks like Guindy National Park, Point Calimere and Vellandu sanctuaries of Tamil Nadu. Rollapadu of Andhra Pradesh, few parts of Rajasthan and Haryana. As far as their habitat is concerned, they live in open grasslands, dry areas or thinly populated areas and near water resources. They live in the desert areas of Rajasthan and coastal areas because they cannot sustain cold climate. They are the fastest running animals on this planet. Further, this animal is active during the day, but slows down in its activities after midday. They are social beings. Hence, they move with their herds, which can vary from 3 to 23 mates. They cohabit twice in a year and give birth twice in a year.

Prior to independence, this antelope was extensively hunted which affected their population so much that this species has reached the stage of extinction in many parts of the country. Poachers kill them mainly for material gain. Its skin has an enormous value in the market. In order to protect this species, the IUCN has declared this species threatened. Hence, under Schedule I of the Wildlife Protection Act of 1972, numerous stern measures have been taken. To specify a few, Kaimur Wildlife Sanctuary, Gir Forest National Park, Velavadar Wildlife Sanctuary (Gujarat), National Chambal Sanctuary, etc. Despite these acts, hunting is adversely affecting our wildlife. There are some solutions to this problem but the best one is to boycott the products made from endangered species at an international level. This seems to be effective but will it prevent animal hunting? That's a question.

Financial literacy is the ability to understand and effectively use financial skills. These financial skills are as simple as budgeting, investing, credit management, and financial management. In other words, financial literacy is the ability to manage money. A strong foundation of these financial skills will help in achieving various life goals like retirement, education, and even going on a vacation.

Financial literacy includes many skills. However, the most popular ones are budgeting, managing expenses, paying off debt, and understanding the risk-return trade-off in investment products. Acquiring these skills would require one to understand the basic financial concepts like time value of money, compound interest, annualised return, and opportunity cost.

With an abundance of credit products available in the market, like credit card debt, overdraft facility on debit cards, and EMI, financial literacy becomes important. Understanding debt and having basic financial knowledge will help individuals to use these products responsibly.

Financial literacy often teaches individuals how to make major financial decisions. Moreover, it increases financial discipline and financial capability. This will lead to major lifestyle changes like saving and investing regularly, managing debts effectively and fulfilling life goals efficiently. Additionally, financial literacy will ensure one's financial well-being and also protect individuals from financial frauds.

Lacking the knowledge of these skills leads to financial illiteracy. Financial illiteracy leads to budget mismatch, higher expenses than income, accumulation of debts, poor credit score, being victims to financial frauds, and other negative consequences.

Financial literacy is important because it equips one with the knowledge and skill to manage money effectively. Without financial literacy, the actions and decisions one makes or do not make with respect to savings and investments would lack a strong foundation.

Financial literacy helps in understanding financial concepts better and enables one to manage their finances efficiently. Furthermore, it helps in effective money management, making financial decisions, and achieving financial stability. Moreover, financial literacy provides in-depth knowledge of financial education and various strategies that are indispensable for financial growth and success.

Scarlett O'Hara famously asked her husband, Rhett Butler, "Where shall I go?" to which he famously replied, "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn." One of the finest movie quotations ever is found toward the end of director Victor Fleming's 1939 American historical romantic epic film, Gone with the Wind. It's also one of all-time favourite lines from a movie. But in 1930s American society, the term 'damn' was a swear word. Due to the word's offensive nature and consequent prohibition by the 1930 Motion Picture ture Production Code, sometimes known as the 'Hays Code'. American film censors insisted on its removal two months prior to the movie's release. A few weeks before the movie's release, the Motion Picture Association of America board amended the Production Code, which caused the censors to change their minds.

A word that had originally been offensive became suddenly unoffensive, most likely as a result of the changed sensitivities of American culture that made it possible to update the Motion Picture Production Code. Since then, American perceptions of these issues have advanced significantly.

What is offensive to society will continue to be offensive unless its sensibilities significantly shift. People's senses, belief systems, conventions, and practices don't change suddenly. They develop slowly. Therefore, it is meaningless to inquire as to why something should be offensive to some while not being so to others, or why people aren't saner and more tolerant when it comes to sensitive and disputed social topics.

Cinema has a significant impact on its consumers since it is a captivating audio-visual medium of entertainment that teaches information, knowledge, beliefs, values, etc. A film's effects on people and society can be either beneficial or bad depending on its subject matter and method of presentation. While a movie may be suitable for certain people's age and sensibilities, it may not be suitable for other people's age and sensibilities. Not everyone is intended to watch every movie. A controversial movie might also spark societal turmoil or even violence. As a result, every nation requires a formal agency to oversee its cinema ethics and policy. In India, the Central Board of Film Certification (CBFC), sometimes known as the 'Censor Board', must certify a movie as appropriate for the purpose before it can be released for public screening.

Under the Cinematograph Act of 1952, the CBFC, which operates as a statutory agency under the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, controls how movies are shown. Its responsibility is to make sure that the nation's citizens enjoy wholesome enjoyment through cinematic media. The CBFC is required to certify that a movie, in whole or in part, does not jeopardise India's sovereignty and integrity, jeopardise its security and relations with foreign states, cause public disorder or crime, cause defamation or court contempt, violate social norms and values, offend any group of people or community, etc.

- (1) Descriptive
- (2) Sequential

- (2) Because of the conventions
- (3) Because of people's age and norms
- (4) Because of changed sensitivity of American culture

859. Why does CBFC have to certify and control the content shown in a movie?

- (1) To not jeopardise India's sovereignty and integrity
- (2) To cause public disorder or crime
- (3) To violate social norms
- (4) To jeopardise India's security

A Fox, one day, fell into a deep well and could find no means of escape. Meanwhile, a Goat, overcome with thirst, came to the same well, and seeing the Fox, enquired the reason for which the fox was in the well. Concealing his sad plight under a merry guise, the Fox indulged in the praise of the water, saying it was excellent beyond measure, and told the goat that he deliberately jumped in the well to enjoy its benefits. He kept encouraging the goat to jump in the well. The Goat, mindful only of his thirst, thoughtlessly jumped down, but just as he drank, the Fox informed him of the difficulty they were both in and suggested a scheme for their common escape. "If," said he, "you will place your forefeet upon the wall and bend your head, I will run up your back and escape, and will help you out afterwards." The Goat readily assented and the Fox leaped upon his back. Steadying himself with the Goat's horns, he safely reached the mouth of the well and made off as fast as he could. When the Goat upbraided him for breaking his promise, he turned around and cried out, "You foolish old fellow! The major factor in ensuring the safety of the food supply is food packaging. To ensure that food safety criteria are met, advances in food processing and packaging have dramatically increased. When food processing is finished, packaging preserves the benefits without having a negative impact on individuals who consume the food. Additionally, it enables food to be transported from the point of production to the point of consumption while maintaining its integrity despite the considerable distance. Additionally, it shields delicate foods from light, physical harm, and chemical changes as well as against microbial contamination of meals like meat. In other cases, the packaging is used for business promotion in the food processing industries. The packages frequently brand the business or promote it in some way. Packages can occasionally improve a product's appearance and increase consumer appeal. To comply with rules, packaging technology must strike a compromise between a number of issues. These include the protection of food along with other factors including increased social and environmental awareness, the expense of energy and materials, rigorous limits on pollutants, and the removal of municipal solid waste.

Food packaging can be made from a variety of materials, some of which include foil, laminates, coated sheets, films, metals, plastics, conventional, and paper. Some of these things don't decay at all, while others degrade in varying degrees. The topic of environmental damage brought on by food packing materials is not new. Plastic and other items are virtually universally discarded, harming the ecosystem. Despite how important packaging is, it nevertheless poses a serious environmental risk.

The process of making packaging necessitates the use of natural resources, which results in the destruction of a variety of unintended animal habitats. Some businesses, like those that harvest trees, also don't allow the growth of many of the natural resources they use. Because harmful fumes are released into the atmosphere during the manufacture of these packaging materials, the environment is also harmed. The air will become more contaminated if these processes aren't managed. Occasionally, these packaging wastes are carelessly disposed of, polluting the environment.

ment, and some of those wastes don't disintegrate at all. Wood and paper are two prominent packaging materials made from forest resources. Uncontrolled, contentious exploitation of forest resources will upset the balance of the forests' growth. Erosion, desertification, water scarcities, and a host of ecological issues are just a few of the effects of an unbalanced growth rate. Non-biodegradable packing materials have long-lasting negative effects on the environment and can harm soil and other components through aquatic and atmospheric processes. This can lead to food insecurity, harm to other creatures, and damage to ecology and marine life. Improper disposal of packaging waste can be fatal to animals and impact spawning seasons, making pollution a serious concern. Food packaging has a negative impact on the environment, thus it's important to manage the trash properly to protect human health, the environment, and natural resources. Some of these methods include utilising less packaging, creating products with longer shelf lives, and repurposing goods and resources are all part of source reduction. By altering the appearance, acquisition, production, or usage of the originating material and products, source reduction also lowers the quantity and toxicity of the trash. Waste combustion is a controlled burning method used at specific facilities to dispose of non-recyclable materials. Waste-to-energy combustion incinerators use steam generators to produce heat for electricity generation. Composting is the controlled aerobic or biological decomposition of organic waste and is an effective waste disposal solution. This process involves placing organic debris in piles and providing sufficient moisture for decomposition by microorganisms.

The French Revolution is a revolutionary movement that occurred in France between 1787 and 1799 and reached to its (1) in 1789. This revolution had many causes but the most important of all was (2) of bourgeoisie, who were merchants, manufacturers and professionals. The peasants, many of them landowners, wanted to get rid of the practices of absolute monarchy and feudalism. Another factor was an increase in population due to decreased mortality rates. This led to a clamor call for social reforms. Intellectuals like Rene Descartes wrote about new things about political, social and economic matters. A fundamental political and societal change was to occur. The French Revolution played a critical role in shaping modern nations by showing the world the power inherent in the will of the people.

Algae are photosynthetic creatures that have pigments that aid in photosynthesis, such as chlorophyll. They do not, however, have the actual stems, roots or leaves found in vascular plants. While some of them have many cells, others are unicellular. They might establish colonies as well. The majority of algae are aquatic. Some are terrestrial, and they can be found on rocks, trees and moist soil. Certain algae species coexist well with other living things. For instance, lichens are a symbiotic relationship between green

(and often blue-green) algae and fungi. Algae are members of a multiphyletic group. This indicates that there is no common ancestor and that the species in this category are not necessarily closely related. They do not have other morpho-anatomical characteristics typical of vascular plants, but they do have one thing in common: they are eukaryotes with the principal pigment being chlorophyll. They use them to perform photosynthesis. Phycology is the scientific name for the study of algae. The blue-green algae is one example of a reference. But some sources do not classify them as algae because they are prokaryotes.

876. According to the passage, which is the main pigment in algae for photosynthesis?

- (1) Chlorophyll
- (2) Xanthophyll
- (3) Carotenoid
- (4) Melanin

877. What is the central theme of the passage?

- (1) The anatomy of vascular plants
- (2) The diversity and characteristics of algae
- (3) The prokaryotic nature of blue-green algae
- (4) The symbiotic relationship between algae and fungi

878. Which statement accurately describes vascular plants based on the information in the passage?

- (1) Vascular plants have true stems, roots and leaves, unlike algae.
- (2) Vascular plants are unicellular in structure.
- (3) Algae and vascular plants share the same morpho-anatomical characteristics.
- (4) Vascular plants lack stems, roots and leaves.

879. What does the term 'multiphyletic group' mean in the context of algae?

- (1) Being closely related species
- (2) No common ancestor, not closely related
- (3) Having diverse morpho-anatomical characteristics
- (4) Having a common ancestor

Subhas Chandra Bose, a prominent Indian nationalist leader, was convinced that India could not achieve independence without the use of force, and he believed that a military campaign was necessary to achieve this goal. In 1942, Bose formed the Indian National Army (INA) with the help of the Japanese.

Bose travelled to Japan in 1941 to seek their support in the struggle against British rule in India. The Japanese were interested in having Bose's help in their own efforts to expand their influence in Southeast Asia. Bose's vision was to create a military force to fight against the British in India with the help of Japanese weapons and training. The INA was formed in Singapore in September 1942 with the slogan 'Jai Hind' (Victory to India). The INA consisted of soldiers who were primarily from the Indian community in Southeast Asia. They were trained by Japanese officers and were equipped with Japanese weapons. The INA fought alongside Japanese forces in Burma and other parts of Southeast Asia during World War II. Bose's leadership of the INA and his military campaigns against the British in India made him a popular figure among many Indians. The consequences of the formation of the INA were significant for the INA's campaigns against the British in India and the Indian soldiers' role in the Burma campaign had a psychological impact on the British forces. The British were shocked that Indian soldiers had turned against them, undermining their confidence in maintaining control over India. The INA also had a significant impact on the Indian independence movement. Bose's vision of a socialist India and equal rights for all citizens inspired many Indians. The slogan 'Jai Hind' became a symbol of the struggle against British colonialism, and Bose's slogan of 'Jai Hind' became a rallying cry for the independence movement.

However, the INA's military campaigns were not successful in achieving their goal of freeing India from British rule. The INA suffered significant losses in battles, and their efforts were undermined by the Japanese surrender in 1945.

880. What ultimately undermined the INA's efforts to free India from British rule?

- (1) The Japanese surrender in 1945
- (2) The lack of support from the Indian and British people
- (3) Gandhi's death
- (4) The inferior military tactics of the British forces

881. How did Subhas Chandra Bose view India's fight for independence?

- (1) Through political negotiations
- (2) Through economic sanctions
- (3) Through military campaigns
- (4) Through non-violent means

882. What was the primary reason for the Japanese to support Subhas Chandra Bose and the formation of the INA?

- (1) They believed in Bose's vision of a communist India.
- (2) They wanted to expand their influence in Southeast Asia.
- (3) They were looking for allies in their fight against the British Empire.
- (4) They believed in India's right to self-determination.

883. What was the significance of Bose's slogan 'Jai Hind'?

- (1) It symbolised the struggle against British colonialism.
- (2) It was a call to arms for the Indian and British Army.
- (3) It represented Bose's vision of a capitalist India.
- (4) It manifests the vision of selected communities.

The extraction of indigo dye involves harvesting the green leaves of the Indigofera plant before its flowers bloom. These leaves undergo a process of soaking in water and churning until a navy blue froth is released. The upper portion of the resulting mixture is drained for irrigation, while the leaves are repurposed as fertilizer. After allowing the water and fine sediment to settle for a day, the liquid is separated from the sediment. The obtained deep blue paste is then subjected to filtration to remove dirt and impurities, followed by compression into cakes and drying for several days. Once dried, the indigo is ready for use as a dye. Lime (Ca(OH)₂) can be added to the initial water and leaves mixture, and various natural sugars can be dissolved into the paste to enhance the extraction process.

884. What is the overall tone of the passage?

- (1) Humorous and light-hearted
- (2) Critical and analytical
- (3) Informative and instructional
- (4) Emotional and sentimental

885. What is the central theme of the passage describing the extraction process of indigo dye from the Indigofera plant?

- (1) The impact of lime and natural sugars on the indigo extraction process
- (2) The various uses of indigo dye in different industries
- (3) The intricate process of harvesting and processing indigo leaves
- (4) The cultivation and growth cycle of the Indigofera plant

886. Select the most appropriate synonym of the word 'impurities' from the options given below.

- (1) purity
- (2) scum
- (3) pureness
- (4) cleanliness

887. In the extraction process described, what is the purpose of allowing the water and fine sediment at the bottom of the tank to settle for a day?

- (1) To enhance the aroma of the indigo dye
- (2) To facilitate the separation of liquid from sediment
- (3) To create a unique texture in the final indigo paste
- (4) To promote the growth of additional indigo leaves

Reading is an important communication skill that has many benefits and it has great impact on a person's life. We should develop a reading habit as it allows us to learn new information and gives us access to a wide range of opportunities and ideas. So, reading regularly not only broadens our aspect and knowledge but also improves our intelligence, perspective, judgement and understanding of the world. It helps to stimulate creativity and imagination, to relieve the stress and pressure, and to provide a source of entertainment. The major benefit of reading is to develop the analytical and critical skills of a reader. The former involves gathering information and breaking it down into parts for better understanding, while the latter involves evaluating the same information and making judgements based on evidence. Reading a book or any content improves our language and vocabulary, so we can easily comprehend the words and their use in the context. It also helps in cognitive development in young children so at the primary level, children are more involved in reading rather than writing.

888. Which skill is used by a reader when he evaluates the same information and makes judgements based on evidence?

- (1) Critical skill (2) Technical skill
(3) Analytical skill (4) Drawing skill

889. Cognitive development in a child is related to:

Engaging in regular physical activity is not only beneficial for physical well-being but also has a profound impact on mental health. Studies have shown that exercise releases endorphins, chemicals in the brain that act as natural painkillers and mood elevators. Additionally, consistent exercise has been linked to reduced symptoms of anxiety and depression. Contrary to common misconceptions, it doesn't require intense workouts; even moderate activities like walking or yoga can contribute to improved mental well-being. Making exercise a regular part of one's routine not only supports physical fitness but also nurtures a positive and resilient mindset.
